TO DEPORT BOSTON 'REDS'

Order for Roundup in This City Follows Raid in Chicago

The probability of widespread raids in various cities of the country, including Boston, was forecasted today following the roundup of more than 200 alleged "Reds" in Chicago.

State's Attorney Hoyne, who directed the cleanup in Chicago despite the express orders of the Department of Justice, said today that leading agitators in a conspiracy to overthrow the government centred their activities in Boston, New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Seattle.

According to reports from Washington, arrests will be made in the cities named and deportation will be

Twins Are First on New Year's List of Babies

Blessings, like misfortunes, seldom come singly.

The first recorded birth of the New Year in the registery office, City Hall, is—twins.

James R. Dongan of No. 1949 Dorchester avenue, a shipyard worker, is the happy father who is today passing the cigars. The twins are boys. Mrs. Dongan is reported as doing well by Dr. George N. Littlefield.

THREE BOYS JUMPING ICE CAKES FALL INTO RIVER

Joseph Sullivan, twelve, of Main street, Quincy; John Gough, twelve, of Prescott street, and William Brindley, ten, of Granite street, both of Weymouth, are recovering from the effects of immersion and exposure in the waters of Weymouth River. The boys were jumping ice cakes when one of the cakes upon which all three were afloat, overturned and threw them into the icy water. Young Sullivan swam to the shore. Thomas McCarthy, a fisherman, of Washington street, Weymouth, rescued the two other lads.

TWO KILLED IN DU PONT POWDER MILL EXPLOSION

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—Two men were killed and another perhaps fatally injured in an explosion today in the Hagley mill of the Du Pont Powder Company near Wilmington, Del. A frame building in which powder is pulverized was destroyed.

Henry Clay, a small village about one-quarter to a mile distant, suffered great damage. Several houses were literally blown apart.

PRISONERS GET DEATH 'LESSON'

Forced to Witness Execution at Chicago Jail for the "Moral Effect"

By International News Service.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Rafaelo Durrazio, a convicted murderer, was hanged in the Cook county jail today while scores of prisoners looked on as involuntary and unwilling spectators.

Prison authorities had arranged that the execution should be witnessed by the jail prisoners for the "moral effect" it would have on their criminal tendencies. Deputy Sheriff Harry C. Laubenheimer planned to have 200 prisoners placed in cells in front of the scaffold.

"I know from experience," he said, "that any one who witnesses a hanging never will deliberately kill. It is the greatest lesson you can give a criminal."

Chicago club and society women, headed by Miss Mary McDowell of the Chicago University Settlement, raised a storm of protest against Laubenheimer's "lesson." They characterized it "as immoral," "disgraceful" and "wholly unnecessary."

They carried their appeal to Governor Frank O. Lowden, who late last night communicated with the jail authorities to prevent the prisoners being forced to witness the execution. The jail authorities promised to remove as many prisoners as possible from cells fronting the scaffold.

When the trap was sprung shortly after 8 o'clock this morning, however, there were many prisoners in the cells overlooking the scaffold. Some cells were crowded with two or three prisoners each. Only one of them was observed to turn his head away as the mask was drawn over the face and the deadly trap sprung.

The others looked on in horrified silence. Jail officials said that the cells held some of the "hardest guys" in the jail.

There was only one sound from the cells filled with prisoners. As the body swung to and fro after the fall, one prisoner started to whistle "Nearer, My God, to Thee," but broke off and turned away. There was none of the growling and the banging of tin pans on steel bars by the prisoners which usually accompanies a "hanging party." Silence reigned over the tiers of cells.

Count Minotto Drops Title, Becomes U. S. Citizen

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Count James Minotto is a count no longer. He is just a plain American citizen. The son-in-law of Louis F. Swift, who was a storm centre during the war and was finally interned at Fort Oglethorpe, has staged a comeback and has branched out into a business career. He was suspected of entertaining pro-German sentiments and fines were rumors of his activities in South America and elsewhere.

Now he has dropped his title of count and is plain James Minotto, American citizen.

"I want to forget the past and hope my friends will do the same," he said. "I am not ashamed of anything I have done, but I want to forget the past. It is a closed incident as far as the government is concerned and as far as I am concerned. As for my political views, since the war it is hardly in keeping with my new status."

FEAR SCHOONER WITH 26 HAS FOUNDERED

Harborville, N. S., Jan. 2.—Many Massachusetts men are believed to be lost in the wreck of the American schooner T. W. A. Allan, parts of which have been washed ashore here from the Bay of Fundy.

The schooner, Captain James F. Silva, had a crew of eight and eighteen passengers. At least three of the crew are known to be from Providence, R. I., and it is feared that twelve New Bedford men have lost their lives.

The schooner sailed from New Bedford November 19 for the Cape Verde Islands. The first known of the disaster was the drifting in of debris. No signals of distress had been received, and maritime authorities fear that the schooner was lost with all on board in the gales which recently prevailed in the North Atlantic.

Among those believed to be lost are Timillia Furtado, a stepson of Captain Silva, who was ship's cook, formerly of Providence; Joseph Silva, of No. 88 Pike street, New Bedford, and William Holden of Wickenden street, New Bedford, who was making his first trip a mess boy.

Captain Silva, who lived in New Bedford, was the owner of the schooner. He bought it last Fall for $6,000. The vessel was built in Dennyville, Me., about fifty years ago, and was formerly engaged in the lumber trade.

BRYAN CAMPAIGN OPENS

HUNT FOR POISON IN WINE

Mysterious circumstances surrounding the death in Los Angeles, Cal., of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Sinclair, formerly of this city, whose bodies were found at their breakfast table, resulted in an exhaustive examination being made today.

The original theory that the couple, who reached Los Angeles for the Winter season a short time ago, had been killed by gas fumes, was upset by the discovery of a small bottle of port wine.

This wine was today turned over to the city chemist, whose analysis is awaited by Melville E. Severy, Mrs. Sinclair's brother-in-law, who discovered the tragedy.

After futile attempts to reach the couple by telephone, Mr. Severy went to their home yesterday in Los Angeles and broke into the house. He found Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair seated at the breakfast table, but closer examination revealed that they were dead. A small gas flame burning under a hot water heater nearby inspired the theory of death by gas poisoning.

The Sinclairs, who were well known in New England, are survived by one daughter, Mrs. Annie Ferdinand of Gloucester. Mrs. Sinclair left two sisters, Mrs. Emma Dunlap of Somerville and Mrs. Mollie Malabar of Georgetown, Me.

Before leaving for California Mr. Sinclair was vice-president of the Choralcello Company of Massachusetts for years. He was one of the inventors of the automatic musical instrument which the company manufactured and which company went into bankruptcy less than a year ago. Its failure resulted in losses to many Boston investors, who had expected large returns on their money.

The choralcello, an electrically operated musical instrument of the type of an organ, was extremely expensive and for that reason the sale was poor. The instrument was invented twenty years ago, but a company to promote its manufacture was not organized for ten years.

A factory was started at No. 34 Farnsworth street, South Boston, and a studio was maintained for six years in the Colonial building, Boylston street, and later at Copley square.

NEBRASKAN TO RUN IN MICHIGAN

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2.—Announcement was made today that a petition was being prepared to place William Jennings Bryan before the voters in the primaries as a Democratic candidate for the Presidency.

Only 100 names are required on a petition to place Mr. Bryan's name on the ballot, and ex-Senator James H. Lee who made the announcement, says he has more than that number ready to sign now.

McKNIGHT DENIES OLD SOUTH BANK PURCHASE

When asked today if the Eaton-McKnight interests contemplated the purchase of the Old South Trust Company, Edwin T. McKnight declared: "Such a report is an absolute falsehood. Eaton and McKnight have been retained as counsel in advising the board of directors in their reorganization plans. But as possess no stock whatever in the bank. Furthermore, we shall not be counsel for the bank hereafter. We are simply going to take care of the legal end of reorganization. I cannot imagine how such a rumor gained circulation. It is utterly false."

$70,000 BONUS GIVEN 800 IN WAKEFIELD

Wakefield, Jan. 2.—A bonus of $70,000, with a wage increase of 10 per cent., was given to 800 employes of the Harvard Knitting Mills here today. Of these employes about 700 are women and girls. This is the third annual division of profits distributed among the employes, and the amount this year is 15 per cent. greater than last year. The wage increase begins today and is the second within the last six months.

Richard Is Happy; His Bathrobe Has Come Back

Richard's bathrobe is found! In a letter to the American today eight-year-old Richard Montana of Roslindale thanks the paper for helping him recover a cherished Christmas present.

The bathrobe that Santa brought him was too small, and Richard's father took it to town to be exchanged. He forgot and left it on an elevated train. Richard got his big brother to write to the American about it, with the result that the bathrobe has been recovered.

Big Brother now writes again for the well-mannered little boy, who has been taught to say "Please" and "Thank you."

Don't mention it, Richard.

JUDGE CHASE QUITS THE SUPERIOR COURT

Judge Frederick H. Chase of the Superior Court has tendered resignation to Governor Coolidge, and will resume the practice of law, having associated himself with Frank H. Stewart.

The retirement of Judge Chase, one of the foremost men on the bench of the Superior Court, came as a surprise to members of the bar who regarded him as a jurist of high rank, and eminently qualified to sit upon the bench of the Supreme Judicial Court.

MILLION TONS OF SUGAR COMING TO U. S.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Nearly one million tons of sugar harvested in Porto Rico will be released for American consumption shortly, the Department of Justice announced today. Attorney-General Palmer received a cablegram from District Attorney Martin at San Juan, declaring that injunction proceedings which had been taken in conjunction with a railroad strike had caused both parties to agree to arbitration.

GO AFTER CITY TAX DODGERS

While Rush to Settle Goes on, Officers Trail the Delinquents

A rush to pay poll taxes set in at City Hall today following the ultimatum of City Collector Frank S. Deland that delinquents must either pay or go to jail.

Long lines of people crowded the office of the collector and swamped the clerical force under the payments of back taxes, many of which have been due for three or four years.

In the short period of three hours after reopening more than 1,500 poll taxes had been paid and there was little diminution in the rush. Clerks of years experience in the collector's office said it was the biggest day's business in the payment of polls that they had known for years.

While hundreds went personally to the collector's office or sent their

Our Report to the People

Our Institution is of, and for the people, and to them we make a report of our progress for the year just ended.

It has been a year of earnest and successful endeavor. We outgrew the Banking-Rooms in which we started business over five years ago and are now housed under a 25-year lease, in a four-story building, centrally located and devoted exclusively to our needs.

During the year, we gained Seven Millions in deposits and Fourteen Thousand new depositors.

We added to our Commercial (checking) Department, a Foreign Exchange Department which puts our depositors in banking touch with the whole world. We have also added a Safe Deposit Department where the securities and valuables of our depositors are absolutely safeguarded.

We have kept our Banking-Rooms open Saturday evenings and holiday eves for the accommodation of the people.

We have shared our prosperity with our Savings depositors by advancing the rate of interest paid to FIVE per cent, and with our employees by advancing their salaries three times during the year.

We have successfully fought in the Legislature for the right of the people to receive the monthly payment of interest, which enables depositors to withdraw at any time practically without loss of any interest. This we are doing.

We owe our growth and prosperity to you. We thank you and wish you all a happy, happy New Year. We urge you to promote your own prosperity—and ours—by opening an account with us either in our Commercial (checking) Department or in our Savings Department. ASSASSINATIONS OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS PLANNED BY THE "REDS"

CHARGE PALMER TRIED TO PREVENT CHICAGO RAID

asked for in the cases of aliens who are caught in the dragnet.

It was stated today that Hoyne's raid was but the first step in another nation-wide roundup of agitators by the Department of Justice. If plans which have been carefully laid do not go astray the raids will be extended to other cities, and it is believed that the arrests will equal those made several weeks ago.

Since the series of raids made upon the Union of Russian Workers, Department of Justice agents have been carefully and secretly planning to clean up other organizations which are considered as dangerous to the government.

Officials were hopeful that the present roundup would net some of the leaders who have been at large up to the present time. It is known that there are several who were listed as passengers for the first "Soviet Ark," but who escaped arrest.

Palmer Accused of Attempt to Prevent Raid on Chicago 'Reds'

By International News Service.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—Chicago jails today held between 250 and 300 persons—men and women—members of the I. W. W. and so-called "Reds," arrested here late yesterday in a series of raids by far the most spectacular ever attempted in this country.

The men and women were arrested by representatives of the State District Attorney's office, aided by hundreds of city detectives and patrolmen. More than 500 officers aided in rounding up the "Reds." Every known headquarters of the I. W. W. and other political agitators were visited by the officers in their search for the agitators, who, according to State Attorney Hoyne, have been planning for several months to establish a Soviet form of government in the United States similar to that of Russia.

Following the raids, State Attorney Hoyne issued a statement in which he accused Attorney-General Palmer with playing "petty politics" and pursuing a "pussyfoot" policy in handling the situation growing out of the activities of political disturbers in this country.

U. S. AID WITHDRAWN.

Hoyne charged Federal aid promised by Attorney-General Palmer had been withdrawn a few hours before the raids were launched.

Hoyne declared today that regardless of the refusal of the Attorney-General to co-operate with him, he would continue in his drive against the "Reds" in this city until he had driven them out. Accordingly he gave instructions for agents of his office to continue their search and today police detectives and these agents resumed their search for several I. W. W. leaders who escaped from them yesterday. Hoyne also declared he believed "some one had tipped the 'Reds' off as to the coming raids."

The drive against the so-called "Reds" resulted from an organized campaign of Chicago merchants, bankers and business men to rid the city of those who are seeking to overthrow the government.

PLAN ASSASSINATIONS.

The campaign has been under way for nearly five months. The business men have been meeting secretly for several months. Plans for the raids were made at these meetings. The situation was regarded as a menace, and a fund was subscribed to pay the expense of a thorough investigation of conditions. More than $40,000 was spent in this investigation. Operatives of a private detective agent made a complete check of the leaders of the radical movement, their publications, print shops and their principal propagandists.

Agents of the State's attorney's office took an active part in these investigations. Hoyne made frequent trips to Washington to solicit the aid of the attorney general and declared that Palmer recently promised the required aid.

Hoyne's operatives reported that a meeting of the "Reds" had been called for January 17, at which plans for the assassination of several public officials and for the overthrow of the government were to be discussed.

"REDS" WARNED OF RAID.

Hoyne's operatives, who, posing as anarchists, had been able to attend several meetings of these "Reds," reported that plans for this meeting had suddenly been changed. The date was changed. The meeting would be held January 1 instead of January 17, as originally planned. Hoyne hurriedly changed his plans and was ready to raid the meeting when his operatives reported that his movements "had been tipped off" to the "Reds." Hoyne declared Federal agents told his detectives who were disguised as anarchists of Hoyne's visits to the Federal Building A short time later the meeting was called off by leaders of the anarchists. Hoyne decided to proceed, however, with previously made plans for raiding I. W. W. headquarters. He declared federal aid had been promised him in these raids. A few hours before the raids were to be started Hoyne received a letter from Attorney-General Palmer.

The letter requested me not to proceed with the raids, as I might interfere with government activities," Hoyne said.

The letter was delivered to Hoyne by John T. Creighton, special representative of the attorney-general.

"I told Mr. Creighton I could pay no attention to the letter," Hoyne said. "I told him Mr. Palmer and other officials of the government knew the time and plans for the raid and that less than twenty-four hours before they asked me not to proceed.

"Apparently Attorney-General Palmer or some of his friends are playing petty politics with the situation and are pursuing a pussyfoot policy. I wish to say, however, that at all times I have had the complete cooperation of General Wood and Major Crockett, who agree with my policy and share my views."

Palmer Denies That He Failed to Co-operate in Raids on Chicago "Reds"

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Attorney-General Palmer today denied charges made by State's District Attorney Hoyne that the Department of Justice had failed to co-operate in the raids made last night in Chicago which resulted in the arrest of some 200 or more alleged "Reds." "That charge is ridiculous," said Attorney-General Palmer. "We have always tried to co-operate with State officials.

"With regard to the charges made by Mr. Hoyne that I am playing 'petty politics,' I can only say now that I shall answer that statement later in the day with a formal statement."

It was strongly intimated at the Department of Justice today that the Chicago raids may have upset some plans which the Department of Justice had in the making and that it may have been premature.

Attorney-General Palmer's statement that he could not always tell "what all of our plans are," was interpreted here as intimation that the Department of Justice had some plans which were conflicted with by the action in Chicago.

REIDY FORCED TO PAY BACK POLL TAXES

wise to pay their taxes. Constable Charles P. Palmer was busy serving tax warrants on residents of Ward 16, Roxbury, who have ignored demands sent through the mail. For these men when found, the bill included not only the poll tax with interest, the constable's fees and garfare and the possibility of arrest if the terms of the warrant were not immediately complied with.

"Informers" were busy, too, notifying City Collector Dowd by telephone of several of their acquaintances who boasted that they had not paid poll taxes for several years and did not intend to. Several Representatives in the last Legislature are among the number of delinquents.

Collector Ireland made out a tax warrant today for William H. Heard of No. 41 Lampson street, East Boston, a Representative in the last Legislature, from Ward 2. The records show that Heard has not paid a poll tax for the past three years, it was stated.

PAYS FOR THREE YEARS.

Among those who paid back poll taxes today was Representative Michael J. Reidy of Dorchester, who was served with a demand notice to pay his taxes within two weeks or face the legal consequences. Mr. Reidy produced a receipted tax bill for 1917, but had no receipt for the years 1916, 1918 and 1919. Being informed that the records showed that he had not paid his poll taxes for these three years he promptly squared himself.

The making out of hundreds of other poll tax warrants is going forward as fast as the limited force at his command will allow, Collector Deland said. He said it is his intention to clean up all the back taxes remaining on the books and to get in all the 1919 poll taxes as well.

THREE WOMEN AND FOUR MEN SUE FOR DIVORCE

Married thirty-six years ago, Adelard Lesage of Lowell has brought suit for divorce from Mrs. Mathilda Lesage of Champlain, P. Q. They were married in August, 1883, and Lesage charges desertion for ten years ago.

Another marriage of long standing is threatened with disruption in the suit of Mrs. Clara B. Maddox against John C. Maddox, both of Somerville, who were married almost thirty-five years ago. Mrs. Maddox charges cruelty, non-support and desertion in 1908. Both suits are filed in the middlesex Superior Court at East Cambridge.

Mrs. May Bickerton of Ayer charges James L. Bickerton of parts unknown with cruel and abusive treatment, and gross and confirmed habits of intoxication, and asks the custody of an only child. They were married in 1899.

Mrs. Gertrude A. Sheriff of Somerville alleges that Guy M. Sheriff of New York deserted her, and asks for the custody of three children, James Kemp of Somerville charges Mrs. Harriet M. Kemp of Pittsfield, N. H., with desertion. Unfaithfulness is the charge brought by Charles Wolcott of Marlboro against Mrs. Margaret Wolcott of Lynn. He asks for the custody of two children. Ralph C. Wood of Lowell sues Mrs. Lillian Wood of Newburyport, alleging desertion.

WOOL MERCHANT FILES BANKRUPTCY SCHEDULE

Israel Siegel of Callender street, Dorchester, a wool merchant at No. 120 Bedford street, today filed a schedule of bankruptcy, following his recent petition, showing liabilities as $87,153. His assets, in the hands of a temporary receiver, have not yet been ascertained. Siegel also ran a cloak and suit store at No. 2013 Washington street.

Creditors mentioned are Frank Brothers at Lawrence, with a secured claim of $9,195. The following are all unsecured: M. Flum of New York, $10,890; Weil & Horowitz of New York, $4,587; Prudential Trust Company, $2,500, and the Royal Textile Company of Boston, $4,621.

LANSING HASN'T HEARD OF MURGUIA'S "REVOLT"

Washington, Jan. 2.—The State Department today was without advices as to the report that General Francisco Murguia, commander of Mexican federal troops in the State of Coahuila, had revolted against President Carranza. Reports that General Murguia had been relieved of his command for failure to attack Villistas when they raided Columbus were without official confirmation, but it was believed that, if Murguia was relieved, he would make a vigorous protest and might refuse to give up his command.

SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS FIRE IN TROLLEY CAR

Fire caused by a short circuit damaged a heavy Elevated car, stored in the Guild street, Revere, yards of the railway, to the extent of $700 today. The blaze worked up the partitions and under the seats. The Elevated volunteer department from the Hartlett street shops had a stream on the blazing car when the firemen arrived.

New War Savings Stamps

The new War Savings Stamps in the National Thrift campaign were placed on sale today throughout New England. Meantime active plans for pushing the campaign are being formulated by the directors of the savings division, First Federal Reserve district.

The new stamps are carmine in color and bear the likeness of George Washington.

1 Per Cent. Carbolic Whiskey Fails to Kill Drinker

Providence, Jan. 2.—There was little effect noticed after Peter Nelson, thirty-five, drank a third of the contents of an eight ounce bottle of medicated alcohol at the Union Station. Patrolman Henry C. Deering took the bottle from him.

Nelson was sent to the Rhode Island Hospital, sick, but not critically so. The liquid taken from Nelson contains 1 per cent. of carbolic acid and the doctors could not explain why Nelson gives promise of surviving.

Nelson said he had no home and no relatives in this country, but that he had worked recently in Smithfield. The patrolman engaged in plain clothes work about the station saw Nelson take the bottle from his pocket and followed him into the men's waiting room, where Nelson was seen to drink.

SOCIAL SERVICE CLASS PLANS LECTURE COURSE

The Social Service Class, a group of men and women of the Church of the Disciples, has arranged a course of lectures to be given on Tuesday evenings, beginning January 6, at 8 o'clock, in the church parlors. "Political Parties" will be the subject of talks by Mrs. Ida Porter Hoyer on January 6, at the home of Mrs. Maud J. Powell, No. 28 Belvidere street, and on January 8, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Linnie H. Grover, No. 87 Gainsboro street. She will discuss "The Political Vocabulary" before the Hyde Park Current Events Class Wednesday morning, January 7, at 10:30.

POLICEMAN AND AUTO BANDITS IN GUN FIGHT

Cause Scare at Medford Hospital; Thieves Escape After Chase From Garage

A running gun fight between two auto thieves and a policeman caused a scare in Medford today, particularly among the patients of the Peckham Hospital on Allston street, under whose windows the greater part of the pistol duel was staged. The thieves escaped.

Special Officer McGrath of the Medford police noticed two men on Bennet street, whose actions seemed suspicious. He followed them, believing that he was unobserved. As he turned a corner leading into a private garage on Bennet street the men opened fire on him. The officer returned the fire and started after the men.

They kept firing as they ran, and the residents of the district startled, peeped from their windows, while a score of calls went into the station house.

Sergeant Golding and a squad of men hastened to the assistance of McGrath and reached the spot in the rear of the Peckham Hospital on Allston street, just as McGrath emptied his gun. The gunmen leaped a fence in the rear of the hospital and made their getaway.

ARMED MEN ROB LIMERICK POSTOFFICE

Dublin, Jan. 2.—Twenty armed, masked men, with an elaborate system of pickets, held up and robbed the Limerick postoffice of $10,000 early today, said a dispatch from that city.

Dillon Appeals for New Leadership of Irish

Special Cable Dispatch. By Universal Service.

Dublin, Jan. 2.—John Dillon, the Irish Nationalist leader, says in a letter to the town clerk of Black Rock that he feels confident the people of Ireland "realize the mistaken course they were led into a year ago by the treacheries of the government."

He urged all who are not satisfied with the result of the new leadership "to get together and organize."

HAVERHILL BROKE ALL SHOE RECORDS IN 1919

Haverhill, Jan. 2.—The year of 1919 was a banner one for local shoe manufacturers. The records of 127 shoe manufacturers show an increase of 2,000,000 pairs of boots, shoes and slippers manufactured during the last twelve months. The value of the products is 50 per cent. greater than on the proportionate shipments a year ago.

Quebec, Jan. 2.—The ice-breaker Manitoba is at Sydney today awaiting calmer weather before she sets out to rescue the small colony of lighthouse and wireless operators who are marooned on Belle Isle. There are twenty-five persons in the party, nine of them children, and at last reports their provisions were nearly all gone. They could not be reached

HELD AS CHURCH PARISH HOUSE BURGLAR

Charles Hagerty, thirty years old, claiming no residence, was held in $5,000 for the Superior Court by Judge Churchill in Dorchester Court today on a charge of breaking and entering in the night time the parish house of the First Parish Church, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, and stealing silverware.

The arrest was made by Inspector T. F. Mulrey of police headquarters.

The parish house, occupied by Rev. Harry Foster Burns, was entered during the night of December 28. It is located at No. 29 High street.

Hagerty, it is alleged pawned twenty-three silver spoons, a silver ladle, silver sugar tongs and other small articles valued at $47.50. The pawnbroker identified Hagerty as the man who received the money on the articles.

Hagerty waived examination and was remanded to the Charles street jail.

The prisoner has served sentences in Boston and Sing Sing, New York, the police allege.

URGES SUFFRAGE AGE BE LOWERED TO 17 YEARS

The lowering of the suffrage age to seventeen years was advocated by Chandler Owen, editor of the New York Messenger, in Lorimer Hall, in the course of an address on the negro problem.

In suggesting seventeen as the age to begin voting, he declared that this should be uniform. Persons, he said, are mentally matured at that age to warrant them suffrage. He claimed the age has not been lowered because it would increase the number of voters and result more expensively to bribers. For the same reason, he added, the bribers have opposed woman suffrage.

GREATEST OF ALL JANUARY FUR SALES

Not a purchase of Furs at their present high prices, but Furs from Chandler & Co.'s superb stock

$50,000.00

worth of

Magnificent Furs

Newest Styles

MARKED DOWN

In the past this sale has been largely made up from purchases in the market—Furs which could be obtained at decided discount on account of the wholesalers letting their stocks go.

But this year the prices at which the wholesalers have their furs marked are so extravagant that (notwithstanding they offer them at discounts) they were hardly as low in price as Chandler & Company's furs in regular stock. So, instead, they have taken their own high-grade furs, many of which were marked at retail at about the prices which the wholesalers in New York want today for their furs, and marked them down rather than let this Annual Sale go by without the usual annual values being offered.

REARREST OF WIDOW OF SLAIN J. STANLEY BROWN ORDERED

STATE TO GRILL HER AGAIN

Cecil Vester, "Vampire" Girl, May Be Released Tomorrow

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 2.—State Attorney-General Alex J. Groesbeck today took charge of the investigation into the murder of J. Stanley Brown near here, December 23. He began proceedings in the nature of a Grand Jury injury before Justice William Bawn, and his first act was to order the rearrest of Mrs. Ruth Brown, widow of the slain man. He directed that she be held in the county jail for further questioning by him.

No further effort will be made by counsel for Lloyd Prevost, in jail for examination, to be released on habeas corpus proceedings, and it is generally believed that the Vester girl will be released at her examining trial tomorrow.

Cecil Vester, accused of the murder and a friend of both Prevost and the dead man, faced Prevost in jail here and accused him point blank of the murder. Prevost refused to utter a word, either of denial or assent. Interest in the case was added when it was alleged that Brown had been aware of the reported relations that existed between his wife and Prevost. The slain man had, it is declared, requested Prevost to cease his attentions to Mrs. Brown.

"You killed Brown. I dare you to look me in the eye and deny it," said Cecil Vester when she confronted Prevost in the jail.

Prevost remained silent.

"Do you think any girl had the nerve to do this?" demanded the girl.

Again Prevost kept his silence.

Miss Vester admitted her friendship with Brown but denied any part in the murder.

The authorities, so far, have been unable to find anyone who could account for Prevost's whereabouts on the night of December 23, the night Brown met his death. Prevost declares he did not meet Brown after he parted from him early in the evening. Brown is said to have declared shortly after 10 o'clock that he was going down town to meet Prevost.

Deputy sheriffs today began rounding up several "material witnesses" who will testify at the hearing of Mrs. Vester.

Those sought as material witnesses include Gladys Summitt, who, in a statement implicated the Vester woman in the murder of Brown. Ben Sorenson, Camp Custer soldier, who claims to have been with the Vester woman in Battle Creek the night of the murder, will also testify.

Subpoenas have also been issued for Hallie Bennett and her sister, Mrs. Clara Williams. Miss Bennett, the police say, gave information which resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Vester.

Mrs. Mabel Evitt, who claims to have seen Mrs. Vester in Battle Creek on the night of the murder, is being sought.

No formal charge has been lodged against Prevost, according to the authorities. Citizens of Mt. Clemens today began circulating petitions asking the appointment of Fregs Kuhn of Detroit, as special prosecutor, to handle the case.

THOUSANDS GO TO PRESBYTERIAN PASTORS

A New Year's gift of $17,150 was distributed among Presbyterian annuitants when each of the 1,714 beneficiaries on the roll of the relief department of the Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation received a special grant of $10, with holiday greetings. Disabled Presbyterian ministers, widows of ministers, orphan families and commissioned lay missionaries profited by the distribution. The board decided to make this immediate effect the increase in allowances to those on the roll from $500 to $500. The matter is also under favorable discussion of reducing the age limit for honor roll members from seventy to sixty-five years.

THREE HELD FOR TRIAL IN FREIGHT CAR THEFTS

Providence, Jan. 2.—Louis Fabricant of New York, with Hyman Katz and Samuel Needles, Fall River dry-goods dealers, answered to Federal indictments here today charging them with conspiracy in connection with interstate commerce thieving. The men, all of whom were released on bail, were held for trial by Federal Judge Arthur L. Brown, the charge having to do with thefts from the New Haven railroad. It is charged that Fabricant disposed of large quantities of the cloth, knowing it to be stolen.

Wine Cargo in Danger of Being Seized By Government

Fourteen casks and 165 cases of port wine, part of the cargo of the Portuguese steamship Gon., will be seized by the government unless permission is obtained to export it from Boston.

This statement was made today by Deputy Collector Eli Perry of the local Customs Department, who said that the wine, which is still aboard the steamship, is in this country illegally.

The Gon, which is docked at South Boston, arrived here on Wednesday from Lisbon, Portugal, with the wine which was consigned to New York. According to Deputy Collector Perry, the owners of the ship will have to obtain permission from Washington to export the wine.

4,000,000 IN U.S. ARE SHORT OF HOMES

Housing Corporation Suggests Increase in Rents as Incentive to Building

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The new year finds 4,000,000 people of approximately 4,000,000 people in the United States short of homes. This appalling shortage of homes is particularly apparent in the densely populated eastern section of the country, but it prevails to some extent in practically every State in the Union, according to figures on file with the United States housing corporation.

An increase in rents is one of the solutions of the housing shortage offered by officials of the United Housing Corporation. To justify this they point to the fact that rents have gone up only 25 per cent. since 1914 in various cities surveyed by the corporation, while other costs of living have advanced 80 per cent. during the same period.

REPENTS AFTER HER SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Woman Falls Down Stairs in Effort to Escape Fumes; Now in City Hospital

After inhaling gas for an hour, Augusta E. Dell, forty-seven, of No. 44 West Newton street, repented of her suicide attempt and fled from the gas-filled room. However, the gas had done its work and the woman fell from the top of the stairway to the hall below. She is in a critical condition at the City Hospital.

Miss Dell, who lives with her sister, Etta J. Dell, a dressmaker, has been ill for a year. Recently she gave up hope of regaining her health. She was found by her sister who was awakened by her fall down the stairs.

"SCISSORS DANCE" MAKES DEBUT IN NEW YORK

PHOTOS © KADEL AND HERBERT

These pictures reveal the mysteries—in part at least—of the dance which pleased Madrid and set Paris wild. Now it has come to America. Originally it was stepped to the lulling music of "Juanita," but New York takes it with the more "peppy" modern music. To describe it is difficult, but the most difficult part is to keep from sitting on each other's knees when the "scissors" movement is executed. It's a continuous slide and dip, and is so strenuous that once around the hall is excuse enough for a rest. (Photos copyrighted by Kadel & Herbert, New York.)

NEWTON'S ANVIL ARTIST FIGHTS FOR RIGHTS

Appears in Court at 75, and Successfully Opposes Daughters, Who Want Him to Quit

Although seventy-five years old and gnarled and knotted by fifty years of toil as a blacksmith, Thomas Belger of Newton Highlands will fight hard before he will retire.

In Newton district court today the aged blacksmith vindicated his right to open up a new blacksmith shop in the Highlands, the opposition of jealous daughters to the contrary notwithstanding.

So the vigorous smith, who has been known to generation after generation of Newton people will hang out his sign at Elliott and Boylston streets, Newton Highlands, within a few days.

Belger was in court on complaint of his three daughters, charged with defacing his own property. The women held that he was not capable of carrying on the smithy at his advanced age, particularly as he had given up the trade a few years ago for a rest. They alleged that alterations on the building which he proposed to establish the shop were simply damaging the property for sale or rental.

The smith appeared in court and vigorously proclaimed his ability to earn a living and his soundness of mind. He indignantly rejected the interference of his daughters and pleaded that a verdict against him would be an acute disappointment and humiliation.

When he was found not guilty he left the courtroom with a light step, declaring that he would soon be doing business at the old shop where he was to be found for a half century. Belger's home is at No. 72 Cook street.

FISHING TRAWLER IN DISTRESS PICKED UP

The steamship Lake Lewando has picked up the trawler Hohnlinden, in distress, off the Delaware breakwater, according to radio messages intercepted at Boston today. The Lewando was en route from Providence to Portland. The Hohnlinden was to be delivered to Boston fishing interests, being one of ten trawlers recently purchased from Savannah, Ga., firms. The trawler developed engine trouble during the worst of the heavy sea which pounded the Atlantic coast. She is being towed to safety.

LADY JELLICOE ILL, VISIT CALLED OFF

Newport, R. I., Jan. 2.—Rear-Admiral William S. Sims was advised by telegraph from Lord Jellicoe that Lady Jellicoe being ill with tonsilitis, it became necessary to cancel their visit to Newport. INDICTMENT OF EX-KAISER IS DRAFTED

Banishment of War Lord Will Follow Conviction, London Believes

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 2.—The indictment of William Hohenzollern, former German Emperor, who is accused of plotting world war in an effort to extend German domination throughout the Globe, is being expanded into definite shape and soon will be ready for submission to the supreme council in Paris, it was learned today.

The various counts in the indictment are an official secret yet, but they are expected to be made public when the extradition of the ex-Kaiser is sought from Holland immediately after the peace treaty becomes effective. According to present plans the peace treaty protocol is expected to be signed during the week of January 5, and the exchange of ratifications will be made at once. The peace treaty then will be in effect.

Sir Frederick Pollock, one of the foremost lawyers in Great Britain and a member of the privy council, has already prepared a rough draft of the indictment, but the chief task now is getting the document in proper, detailed form and legal phraseology.

DOUBTS SET ASIDE.

There was some doubt among British legal lights as to whether it would be possible to draw a binding legal indictment of the erstwhile war lord. The trial of the ex-emperor, a precedent in itself, presented so many and new complex questions that it was feared that an effective indictment could not be drawn up. These objections were overruled, however.

The international court, before which William is to be arraigned in London, will have the authority of the respective governments represented upon it to enforce its decisions. It is a foregone conclusion that the British and French will have the leading part in prosecuting the Kaiser and in formulating the sentence if he is found guilty.

The opinion is prevalent that, if a verdict of guilty is returned, banishment to some remote place will be the sentence.

UP TO SUPREME COUNCIL.

The supreme council in Paris is to pass upon the document as soon as it is in definite form. There are still some international law experts who believe that it will be difficult to make the plans for the trial stick, but nevertheless England and France are going ahead with all the preparations.

After the indictment sin final form and approved by the supreme council the next step will be to levy a demand upon Holland for the former Emperor. Then will come the question of the court. This tribunal probably will have representation from fifve or six powers, although the United States has not been takking an active part in the preliminaries.

Governor Coolidge, Mayor Peters, General Edwards and other prominent State and civic officials will be present tomorrow morning at the opening of the special State convention of the American Legion to be held at Faneuil Hall.

Over 1,000 delegates from various posts of the Massachusetts branch of the legion will be present at the convention, when Commander Logan will be the presiding officer.

A meeting of the Americanism committee, with Chairman Judson Hannigan, will hold a meeting this afternoon when Federal intelligence officers will be present to assist the legion officials in their fight on Radicals, Bolsheviists and the Reds.

16 AUTOMOBILISTS ARE FINED; 4 CASES FILED

Sixteen automobile owners were fined $5 and four cases were filed in the Dorchester District Court today for violation of the automobile laws relating to speeding and passing rays. The complainants were Automobile Officers Gale and McNulty of Police Station 11, and the result of captures in the Columbia road and Dorchester avenue traps.

EIGHT EXPERTS TO DECIDE NEW'S FATE

Record of Thaw Case Exceeded When Alienists Are Called at Trial

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 2.—The trial of Harry S. New, charged with the murder of Irvin Lenon, today established a new record in murder trials, when eight alienists were called upon to testify concerning the sanity of New, exceeding in number the alienists called in the famous Harry K. Thaw trial.

Curiously, the first alienist who will probably be called by the defense is Dr. Edward H. Williams, who was superintendent of the Matteawan Insane Asylum where Thaw was confined.

Of the alienists to be called, five will testify for the defence and three for the prosecution. Besides Dr. Williams, those called by the defence are Dr. Ross Moore, Dr. E. B. Hoag, Dr. E. O. Sawyer and Dr. Raymond Sands. For the prosecution there have been summoned Dr. Louis De Weber, Dr. D. H. Calder and Dr. Charles L. Allen. As the New trial will exceed the Thaw trial in number of alienists, so it will in the matter of the hypothetical question to be submitted to the experts by the defence.

Attorney Lacompte Davis stated that this question will be from 8,000 to 10,000 words and require some time to read. After having run the usual gamut of questions from attorneys for the prosecution in order to qualify as "experts competent to testify," giving their experience in handling patients who were insane, each alienist in turn will be called upon to answer the lengthy question submitted by the defense as to whether New was sane or insane, rational or irrational at the time the crime was committed on July 4.

Briefly and tersely, the question to be answered by the alienists will cover every important feature of New's life from the time he was able to walk down to the date of the tragedy.

If You Haven't One, Here's a 'Fairy' for Your Home

Wanted—A father and mother. He can't ask for what he wants, for he is only eight months old, but he needs parents badly, and promises to be a credit to them. In a letter to the American, a woman who is boarding this baby boy thus explains the circumstances:

The young mother is a hard working girl who cannot afford to support her baby as he ought to be supported. The woman who is caring for the baby has four of her own, and cannot afford to keep him. But she says he is "fat, pretty, weighs twenty-two pounds, and is of American parentage."

Further details will be supplied to any couple willing to adopt this little American and make him their own.

JOSEPH E. CARR, 73, IS DEAD AT WOBURN

Commander Joseph E. Carr of Woburn Post No. 33, G. A. R., died today at his home, No. 24 Franklin street, Woburn, at the age of seventy-three. He was born in New York city, and had lived in Woburn for more than forty-five years. He was a leather worker. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in a volunteer New York regiment, and served for two years and a half, taking part in the Battle of Gettysburg. Mrs. Carr, with five daughters and two sons, survive him. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m., followed by a requiem high mass at St. Charles' Church, Woburn. Burial will be at Calvary Cemetery, Woburn.

FREDERIC W. DICKINSON, APPLETON STREET, DEAD

Frederic W. Dickinson of No. 18 Appleton street died suddenly of heart disease at his residence. He was born in this city in 1853, son of Frederic W. and Jennie Preston Goodrich Dickinson. In his earlier years he was in the wholesale hay business, but of late had been interested in Cape Cod land development, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

MALDEN PLANT SAVED BY NIGHT WATCHMAN

Battles Flames in Converse Factory With Extinguisher Until Arrival of Firemen

Heroically battling flames with an extinguisher until the arrival of the fire department, William Delaney, night watchman at the Converse Rubber Company, Malden, today, saved that structure from destruction and the loss of thousands of dollars' worth of valuable rubber.

Delaney discovered flames on the third floor of the building, a three-story concrete structure, and attempted to extinguish them. His efforts were proving futile, and he succeeded in turning on the water sprinklers after much difficulty. His next act was to sound the private fire alarm. Then he tackled the fire with the extinguisher.

The firemen could not enter the building, and, seeing the flames on the third floor, broke down the street door and rushed a line of hose upstairs. There they beheld Delaney fighting the flames and partly overcome. He was complimented by the firemen for his efforts. The damage is estimated by the insurance adjusters, was $500.

CADET'S DEATH DUE TO ACCIDENTAL SHOOTING

Washington, Jan. 2.—A board of inquest today reported that the death of Midshipman Carroll Joy of Keokuk, Ia., at Annapolis yesterday, was due to "accidental shooting" of a revolver in the hands of a fellow midshipman, the Navy Department announced. While shooting at a target in the woods near Annapolis a gun in the hands of Midshipman M. C. Compton was accidentally discharged and the bullet struck Midshipman Joy.

Department of Art Created by Germany

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.
(Special Radio Dispatch)

Berlin, Jan. 2.—For the purpose of encouraging good art in Germany, the government has created a "department of art" in the Ministry of the interior. Dr. Edwin Redslob, director of the State Art Museum of Wuerttemberg, has been appointed national director. He will act in an advisory capacity in all questions of art and will select as assistants leading authorities from different schools of art.

MISSING SHIP TALUS GIVEN UP FOR LOST

More than six months have passed since the full-rigged iron sailing ship Talus sailed from Glasgow for New York, and there is no longer the slightest hope that she is still above water. What became of her crew of twenty-five men will probably never be known, but without a doubt all went down with the ship, which is believed to have foundered during heavy storms. Since November 12 the Talus has had her name posted on the ominous list of missing craft at Lloyd's Exchange in London.

The Talus was in command of Captain John A. Macdonald, who is well remembered here on account of having brought the ship Walden Abbey from London to Boston a few years ago, successfully eluding German U-boats when the submarine warfare was at its worst.

JEWISH WAR RELIEF TO MAP OUT WORK

A conference of directors and representatives of the New England Bureau for Jewish War Relief will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. at the Elysium Club, No. 218 Huntington avenue. A dinner will be served at the conclusion of the conference, which is to map out the scope of the work of the bureau in New England and to enlist support in the campaign for funds.

Progressiveness Publicity and Prosperity

A progressive is a man who progresses.

The progressive character of a newspaper indicates the progressive character of its readers.

Progressive readers are progressive in thought and achievement.

The young, thinking men of the country are progressive.

They are progressing in mental and material ways.

They are progressing in prosperity.

They are making money and spending money.

The old conservative who has made his money has largely got what money buys.

The young progressive who is making money is daily getting what money buys.

The old conservative is settled in his habits. He goes to his established shop. He buys what he has always been buying. He is not accessible to advertising. Often he doesn't even read it.

The young progressive does read advertising, because it is news to him. It contains lists of what he needs—what he has not got, but what he is going to buy.

He is influenced by advertising because he reads it and because he is a progressive—that is, a man who is open to NEW IDEAS, to new things.

He can be CONVINCED. You can show him. If you have a good thing you can sell him.

You can't sell to a dead one.

You can sell to a "live one."

The young progressive is a live one.

Finally a young progressive clientele is not only worth more to sell to, but you can sell to it longer. It lives longer. The old conservative is about ready to hop off, and the only advertiser who will be interested in him, then, is the auction advertiser who will dispose of his estate.

But the young progressive is here to stay—for some time. He is building his estate—buying his estate. Sell to HIM in HIS newspaper.

The BOSTON AMERICAN is a progressive newspaper.

It has the faith of its readers.

Through it you can reach approximately 300,000 subscribers who buy necessities and luxuries for 1,350,000 people represented in their homes.

Progressive merchants and manufacturers can quickly grasp the advantage of appealing to progressive people like themselves.

A Progressive Paper for Progressive People

NORTHCLIFFE SAYS IRELAND MUST BE FREED OF BRITISH COERCION

DEVELOP ERIN'S NATURAL RICHES, URGES EDITOR

By HAYDEN TALBOT,

Special Cable Dispatch to Universal Service.

(Copyright, 1920, by Universal Service.)

London, Jan. 3.—Lord Northcliffe gave me today a New Year's message to the American people. It deals exclusively with the Irish question and, because I know that many Americans doubt the British government will ever satisfactorily settle this question, I count it the most important part of his message owing to its optimism.

For many years Lord Northcliffe has been using the great power of his newspapers to create public sentiment in England that would compel the government to settle the Irish question. Now that his long fight has been crowned with a medium of success—in the form of the home rule measure recently passed by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons—he is not yet fully satisfied. He is more determined than ever to get for Ireland all it merits in the way of self-government.

But Ireland's political independence is only a part of his constructive scheme. Northcliffe aims at nothing less than Ireland's economic independence — exploitation of her vast natural resources which will enable her to take her rightful place among the world's great industrial peoples.

PRACTICAL PLANS FOR IRELAND.

Among the multiplicity of practical schemes for the rehabilitation of Ireland which Northcliffe earnestly proposes to make accomplished facts, the following have a peculiar interest for all lovers of Ireland in America.

1—There should be no coercion of any portion of Ireland.

2—The right of Ireland to fiscal autonomy should be recognized.

3—Ireland should be enabled to develop political institutions as free as Canada.

4—The very fact that vast numbers of the young Irish folk want to get away from Ireland proves their dissatisfaction with present conditions. Dissatisfaction is the basic cause of emigration.

MUST WIPE OUT POVERTY.

5—The unrest in Ireland had its origin in Irish poverty. Many unskilled Irish workers still receive less in a week than some English workers make in one day.

6—Irish labor is not slothful, as is proved when it is transplanted to the other side of the Atlantic, where opportunity exists.

7—Ireland possesses in her rivers white coal of which a very great amount of horsepower is going to waste each year.

8—English manufacturers should follow the example of Americans like Henry Ford, who has established a great factory in Ireland.

9—A ten minute boat trip is only thirteen miles distant from the Scotch coast. That gap must be tunnelled.

10—What English capital has done in the scientific development of other nations of the British commonwealth must be repeated in Ireland.

OPINIONS OF THE MAN.

These are but a few points Lord Northcliffe made in the course of the interview in his centuries-old room at Printing House square—the mecca of English newspaperdom.

Before I begin to quote him, the importance of what he had to say must be emphasized by setting forth briefly the present opinion in four different quarters of this man, whose newspapers are read daily literally by millions of British subjects the world over, who together form the most numerous audience that any one individual editor has ever been able to hold.

In England he is Viscount Northcliffe, himself an institution almost as much in the public eye as the British Cabinet, opinion here is by no means unanimous regarding him. There still remain some of the crowds who in the early days of the war made bonfires of his Daily Mail and the London Times.

HATED IN GERMANY.

In Germany General Ludendorff told me Northcliffe did more to bring about Germany's defeat than any other ten men in the allied countries. Today it is necessary only to mention his name to discover he is the Teuton people's most hated enemy.

In America—in those quarters in which the combination of a Briton and membership in the House of Lords in itself breeds distrust and hostility—doubt of Northcliffe's sincerity regarding Ireland is widespread.

In his own establishments and, after all, where better can you find an accurate estimate of any man?—he is held a bigger man than even his kindliest critic outside of his employ hold him to be. Not the least convincing proof of this is that the employes in his employ, is the fact that an atmosphere in which Mixed, your lordship, and how-towing generally are a generation, custom and matters of habit. Northcliffe has a nickname—office boys, business manager, stenographers—all call him "Chief."

WAS BORN IN IRELAND.

"In discussing Irish affairs," he said to me, "people usually talk to those of their own way of thinking, which is a waste of time."

Northcliffe is a "born fighter and welcomes an opportunity to face a hostile audience. That may have something to do with his consenting to my request for an interview on the Irish question specially for America.

There was no doubting his purpose when he emphasized his birthright.

"I happen to have been born in Ireland, and I have a strong strain of Irish blood in me. I study therefore some of the national pugnacity."

It was only to prove his innate zest for a fray that he made this reference to his birthplace. I quickly discovered that Northcliffe is convinced the only way to approach the Irish question is with the largest possible measure of sympathy. Where his heart lies he made abundantly clear.

IGNORANCE IN ENGLAND.

"No one," he said, "whose earliest associations of life go back to the salmon leap in an Irish river can be indifferent to that beautiful but badly managed country."

Besides sympathy, there is another requisite which Northcliffe considers indispensable to a solution of the Irish problem—knowledge of the subject. This would seem a self-evident proposition, but the fact that ignorance, even in this late day, is a outstanding feature of English parliamentary discussions of Ireland's fate.

And all ignorance is not confined to England, as Northcliffe sees it.

"Irishmen who emigrated to America in their youth," he said, "and who are now in old age, hold fast to the fallacy that their country is as impoverished and as badly misruled as when they left it. That fallacy has done much to increase difficulties in bringing about her freedom.

U. S. KNOWS TOO LITTLE.

"As a matter of fact, in many respects Ireland today is the freest country in the world. The point is that in the United States altogether too little of the truth about modern Ireland is known. One proof of England's lack of interest in Ireland is that in everything save actual time and distance, it is a less frequent and less comfortable journey from London to west Ireland than to New York.

"Yet, at one point the two coasts are separated only by thirteen miles. Some day there will be a tunnel connecting the two countries at this point. The resultant advantages will be invaluable. The English people may then take the trouble to visit Ireland.

"But before considering the economic development of Ireland the most important, yet least considered, phase of the whole Irish question—let us look at the newest proposal for Irish self-government.

BRITISH RULE ILL-MANAGED.

"The evidence that the Irish population in 100 years has been reduced to what it is, is, from my viewpoint, an unanswerable argument that the Irish department of the British government has been badly managed.

"The fact that young Irish folk want to get away from Ireland and would be getting away by the thousands every day but for the limitations of transportation, proves that things have not been as they should.

"The further fact that the Irish who do go carry with them a sense of grievance which cannot all be artificial sentiment, is proof beyond dispute that the welfare of Ireland and the good reputation of Great Britain can be restored only by the honest effort to find good government for Ireland.

AGAINST ALL COERCION.

"I am against coercion of any portion of Ireland. Whatever form of Irish government may finally result from this newest attempt at Irish reorganization, we must realize that Ireland's future is something very difficult to foresee.

"Active, energetic and thrifty people (the last as evidenced by the savings banks deposits) such as are the majority of the Irish, Ireland never will be likely to settle into a kind of bovine state of contentment—a very pleasant form of peace which, however, might equally be called stagnation.

"The restlessness and independence of the Irish people in north, east, south and west—and their individual love of adventure and fight, by which the British empire has very greatly benefited, would, in my judgment, not evolve a Holland, a Switzerland or a Denmark prosperous. I dare say, and placid but precarious.

"Whatever the new Ireland may become, it will not be a decayed state or states. Her people are alive, prolific, healthy, which as yet is practically untouched by applied scientific development."

(The second instalment of this remarkable interview will be published tomorrow.)

Phoenix Park Deaths to Be Probed by Dublin Board

By Universal Service.

Special Cable Dispatch.

Dublin, Jan. 2.—To prevent recurrences of Sunday's shooting affray in Phoenix Park, the Port and Docks Board at a meeting passed a resolution, moved by the Lord Mayor, demanding a public, sworn inquiry into the deaths of Lieutenant Beard and Lawrence Kennedy, who were killed Sunday in the miniature battle which followed an attempt to raid the vice-regal lodge.

The motion was introduced as a result of widespread indignation of Dublin citizens and an almost universal demand that the real facts of the shooting be determined. The Lord Mayor, in introducing the motion, said:

"The public should be protected against a recurrence of these happenings."

Details of Sunday's affair are still shrouded in mystery. The investigation is expected to start in a fortnight.

FOG MEN, WITH LAMPS, PILOT BUSES IN LONDON

London, Jan. 2.—Fog men have been revived as a London institution. To prevent collisions, men armed with powerful acetylene lamps will pilot auto-bus drivers through congested districts during every fog, day or night. The fogs often are so thick in daytime that vision is limited to less than twenty feet. Accidents result.

The fog-men recall London's eighteenth century "link-boys," who for a fee sometimes forcibly extracted at some dark corner piloted home baffled Londoners from their evening at the coffee shop.

BRIDE WEARS VEIL WORN BY GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Junction City, Kan., Jan. 2.—A bridal veil, one hundred years old, and worn by her mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, was worn by Miss Lucile Conway Cheeseman, of this city, when she was married to William McDonald of Fort Riley at the home of her father, Rev. Dr. Thomas W. Conway Cheeseman rector of the Church of the Covenant here, February 14.

Cuffs on Men's Pants and Coat-Sleeves Tabooed in 1920

By Universal Service.

Atlantic City, Jan. 2.—Men's attires for 1920 will be stripped of unessentials such as cuffs on trousers and coat-sleeves to reduce as far as possible all waste of material, according to reforms predicted as the probable outcome of the convention of the National Association of Merchant Tailors. The convention will be held here and will last a week beginning January 12. It was stated that the organization is likely to set its official frown upon "flashy" clothes for men and that male habiliments for 1920 are to be soberer in tone and cut than recent fashions have dictated.

Tennis Club to Dance

Under the direction of the dance committee, the Arlington Heights Tennis Club will hold its second dancing party of the season, in the Robbins Memorial Town Hall, Arlington, Saturday evening, February 14.

UNHARMED IN WAR, LOSES AN ARM ON FARM

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 2.—After serving two years in the navy, during which time he saw duty on an American submarine in the European war zone and crossed the ocean several times and also did observation work in an aeroplane, Carey Jeffries returned to his home at Fletcher and had been there scarcely a week before he lost his right arm in a corn shredder.

THINGS SLOW DURING DRY SPELL, SHERIFF RESIGNS

Gaylord, Mich., Jan. 2.—Business at the sheriff's office here has been so dull since the country went dry that Sheriff Benj. Hecox has been forced to drive the county road machine in order to make a living. Now he has resigned the office, as the road work is all completed, and will seek employment on a farm.

'POOR' GOING ON INCOME TAX LISTS

Rich Getting Richer, but the Other Class Shows Signs of Prosperity

Income tax returns for individuals, corporations and business establishments embraced by the "excess profits" regulations will be greater this year than last, according to Acting Collector of Internal Revenue Andrew J. Casey. Incomes appear to be growing larger, the rich getting richer and the poor, or relatively poor, also getting richer.

Very few persons are earning less than $1,000 a year, or approximately $19.23 a week, according to internal revenue officials. And every person who is single is liable to pay tax on incomes of $1,000 a year or over. Married persons earning $2,000 a year or over are also liable to income taxation.

Income tax will be levied for 1919 in a different form from that applied on the 1918 tax. Last year the 1918 tax was 6 per cent. on the first $4,000 and 12 per cent. on all earnings in excess of $4,000. This year the tax will be 4 per cent. on the first $4,000 and 8 per cent. on all monies in excess of that.

Income tax returns for the year ending June 30, 1918, for Massachusetts were $245,731,169.36, but this figure, it is expected, will be vastly exceeded this year.

Income tax for the year 1919 can be paid in full or in four installments or less.

The installment quarters end on March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15. Persons liable to taxation should begin now to tabulate their earnings, says Collector Casey. Individual incomes are the most important and of first concern, Mr. Casey said. Corporation taxes come next and then comes the excess profits tax.

Numberless inquiries have been received by mail and telephone at the Internal Revenue Department in the Little Building for income tax blanks. Blanks, however, have not yet arrived from Washington, but as soon as they arrive they will be sent to persons on the 1918 mailing list. Mr. Casey said:

"The returns for 1918 broke all previous records both in the number that were filed and in the amount received, but I expect that for the year 1919, which has just closed (December 31, 1919), this office will do the largest amount of business in its history. We are prepared for a record-breaking year and are ready to give our best effort to assist taxpayers in making out their returns as soon as the blanks are received."

SLAIN MANICURE GIRL AT REST IN EVERGREEN

With extreme simplicity, the funeral of Bertha Dortothy McLeod, killed by Frank Caverley in her manicuring rooms, Winter street, Boston, was held today at her late home, No. 24 Glenville avenue, Allston, Rev. PROTESTANTS TO URGE IRISH FREEDOM

Lindsay Crawford and Rev. A. U. Pope to Address Symphony Hall Meeting

One of the greatest gatherings ever held in Boston in the interests of self-determination for Ireland will be held under the auspices of the Protestant Friends of Ireland, in Symphony Hall, Sunday evening, at 7:45 o'clock.

Lindsay Crawford, one of the leaders in the world-wide movement for Irish independence, and who was editor of the Toronto Statesman and former president of the Loyal Orange Lodges, will be one of the speakers. Sir Arthur Lipton Pope, who resigned his chair in the University of California to devote his entire time to the cause of Ireland, and Rev. James Gordon Mythen, an Episcopal clergyman of Norfolk, Va., also will speak.

The Protestant Friends of Ireland will hold their meeting in the open and a general invitation has been issued to the public to attend.

In a recent article in the American, Mr. Crawford showed how Catholics compose 41.7 per cent. of the total population of Ulster, while no other denomination can boast of more than 26.8 per cent. This is indicative of the fact that the differences existing between Ulster and the other three provinces of Ireland are not based on religious issues.

WOOD ALCOHOL POISONS TWELVE, KILLS ONE

New York, Jan. 2.—The decrease in fatalities from wood alcohol poisoning over the New Year's celebration led the Federal authorities today to the conclusion that they have the situation entirely under control.

Twelve additional cases of wood alcohol poisoning were reported in New York and vicinity. One of the victims died and several others are in serious condition. Six men were taken to the hospital in Newark, N. J., suffering from wood alcohol poisoning. Four in Brooklyn and two in Jersey City. Two saloons in Newark were raided and a quantity of liquor confiscated for analysis.

The Federal agents renewed their search in Brooklyn today for other stores of wood alcohol whiskey which they believe exist there. The Internal revenue agents fear that part of the liquor which caused threscore deaths in New England is still cached somewhere in Brooklyn.

United States Attorney Leroy W. Ross of Brooklyn said that deputy United States marshals would be pressed into service in the new search. Mr. Ross said that the internal revenue staff was inadequate to cope with the great amount of illicit distilling which has sprung up, but that the deputy marshals would materially aid in keeping down the traffic.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM AUXILIARY TO MEET

On Wednesday next at 1:15 p. m. the Women's Auxiliary of the Massachusetts Civil Service Reform Association will hold a luncheon at the Twentieth Century Club, No. 3 Joy street, to be followed at 2:45 by the nineteenth annual meeting, at which Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird will preside. Dr. Frederick A. Cleveland of Boston University, formerly chairman of President Taft's Economy and Efficiency Commission, will speak on "National Efficiency versus National Waste," and Mrs. Arthur Wilson Dennen of New York city, a prominent civic and settlement worker, will speak on "How Civil Service Reform Affects Civic Work."

'SERVICE OF LIGHTS' IN EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The new service of worship for Episcopal churches, known as "The Service of Lights," will be introduced into the church edifices of that denomination Sunday evening. The service, by means of lighted candles, will represent the symbolism of the spreading light. Every church will have twelve vested men, with lighted candles, representing the twelve apostles and three men vested as the Three Wise Men. Every one in the congregation will carry a lighted candle.

NAVAL MEDAL LIST TO GO TO SENATORS

Washington, Jan. 2.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels today said that tomorrow he would submit a full report on the award of naval medals to Senator Page, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate. The report will include the names of 4,000 or 5,000 men recommended for decoration, a list of the ten or more ships attacked by submarines and the personnel of their crew, and a full report of the work of the board of awards, and the action taken by the Secretary on the report.

COURT RULES BEQUEST TO AGED WOMEN'S HOME

New Bedford, Jan. 2.—By a decree handed down by Justice Crosby in the Supreme Court, the decision given by Judge Alger in the Probate Court that the New Bedford Association for the Relief of Aged Women was the institution meant by George F. Barnard in his will is affirmed, and the appeal by the New Bedford Home for the Aged is dismissed.

Under the decree, the income of $2,400 a year, payable from a trust fund created by Mr. Barnard, becomes available for the first named society. The trust is perpetual, its income secured by investments from the residue of the Barnard estate.

F. N. CHAPMAN, SALEM, DROPS DEAD IN STREET

Salem, Jan. 2.—Having collapsed from heart trouble while on his way to do an errand, Francis Needham Chapman, a lifelong resident of Salem, was found dead near No. 5 English street. His home was at No. 8 Briggs street. Mr. Chapman was well-known in New England banking circles, having been for forty-eight years connected with the Eliot National Bank of Boston, most of that time as paying teller. When the bank merged with another, he was retired on a pension. He was seventy-six years old.

Strike Causes Water Famine

Montreal, Jan. 2.—Much discomfort was caused here today by a strike of the employes of the municipal waterworks. Hospitals were hard hit and the streets were filled with men and women carrying pitchers and buckets, who sought water from persons who had a stock on hand.

Curbing Rising Prices

The Shepard Stores Point the Finger of Economy to Opportunities For Lowering the High Cost of Your Living—

We intend that you shall know the possibility of defeating the rising costs by buying wisely at the opportune moment.

We are in full accord with the effort of the Government to call a halt in the constant rise of prices—our profits have always been those of a merchant and never the excessive figures of a speculator.

Although there can be no general fall of prices due to our efforts alone—only increased production can accomplish that—

Nevertheless we know that we can materially lessen the burden of daily expense for our customers interested in economy, and, to a certain extent, make them independent of the daily rise in the cost of every class of merchandise.

We Have Found Opportunities

By using infinite pains in our purchasing—

By combing the market for exceptional values—

By refusing to accept as final, statements that such values are not to be found—

By never being satisfied until the last possibility has been exhausted—

By believing always that "it can be done"—

By giving you, and everyone interested in economy, all possible benefit of our success—

We can uncover opportunities, from day to day, that cannot help but meet in part the demand for lower prices on desirable things.

Large quantities, such as would meet the full demand, may not always be possible—

Full assortments of colors, sizes or styles may not be available in every case—

But for the benefit of all we are going to call attention to whatever seems suitable, in quality and price, to stem the tide of rising prices.

We feel that if you are interested in economy you will not fail to see the value of these opportunities.

'PAPA WILHELM' CHIDES CROWN PRINCE

German Foreign Office Files Reveal Worry Caused by Frederick's Pre-War Talk

By S. D. WEYER,
Cable News Editor of Universal Service.

New York, Jan. 2.—In an urgent telegram signed "Papa Wilhelm," the Kaiser, nearly two weeks before the outbreak of the world war, sharply reprimanded Friedrich Wilhelm, then Crown Prince, for the inflammatory militaristic messages the latter was sending broadcast for publication in junkerist organs. He reminded his son that the latter, as a Prussian officer, must keep his promises and ordered him to desist "once for all" from his political meddlings.

Wilhelm II. took this action upon receipt of a long message from Dr von Bethmann-Hollweg, then Imperial Chancellor, bitterly complaining of the Crown Prince's conduct and earnestly begging the Kaiser to "call off" his young swashbuckling heir.

These messages were brought to light in the course of the German republic's own investigation of war responsibilities. They were on file in the Berlin Foreign Office, and the text is herewith published for the first time on this side. They throw fresh illuminating light upon the relations between the ex-Kaiser and his eldest son. In a recent article in these columns it was shown that during the Verdun offensive the atmosphere between the two was so frigid that Friedrich Wilhelm did not trust himself personally to tell his father all of his misgivings, but unsuccessfully tried to use the King of Bavaria as his messenger. The Kaiser's message, published below, indicates that his troubles with his "enfant terrible" were many and of long standing.

COMPLAINS OF CROWN PRINCE.

Here is the text of Bethmann-Hollweg's telegram, dated Hohenfinow, July 29, 1914:

"I feel constrained to report to your majesty in all reverence that his Imperial highness, the Crown Prince, in contravention of the advice imparted to him and which he had accepted, has lately begun again to come out in public with telegraphic utterances.

"Thus, his imperial highness last week addressed telegrams of very warm approval to Lieutenant-Colonel Probenius and to Professor Buchholz of Posen, congratulating both, the former on his pamphlet 'The Emperor's Hour of Fate,' and the latter on the publication of one of Bismarck's speeches.

"Probenius correctly points to the difficult situation in which Germany finds herself, but at the same time he indulges in pan-German exaggerations calculated to incite a warlike spirit. Buchholz uses a forsooth patriotic eulogy of the great chancellor (Bismarck) as camouflage for violent attacks upon the men whom your Majesty has entrusted with responsible posts.

MESSAGE MADE PUBLIC.

"Both telegrams have been published, and particularly the one addressed to Probenius has been interpreted by the English, French and Russian press as a sign that the Crown Prince takes a position contrary to the policy of your Majesty, and that he is driving for war.

"Furthermore, I know from reliable sources that in the government circles of the triple entente this conduct on the part of the Crown Prince is receiving most serious consideration, being regarded as a significant symptom.

"I have taken the liberty to request his Imperial Highness in a lengthy letter to refrain from such public utterances which, being made without adequate knowledge of the momentary political situation and the diplomatic exchanges, are only apt to embarrass and counteract your majesty's policy.

"In my letter I expressly pointed to the present tensity of the situation. I have, however, no guarantee whatever that His Imperial Highness will fulfill my request. On the contrary, I have grave concerns lest, when the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia comes known, he might come out with public utterances which, after everything that has come to pass, will be looked upon by our opponents as deliberate inciting to war, while, as a matter of fact, it is our task, in accordance with your Majesty's instructions, to localize the Austro-Serbian conflict.

ASKS FOR BAN.

"Fulfillment of this task is in itself so difficult, that even small incidents may have a fateful, decisive effect. I beg, therefore, to express most reverently the request that your Majesty may graciously forbid His Imperial Highness by telegraphic order a continuance of his personal activities.

"In deepest reverence,

"VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG."

The Kaiser forthwith sent the following telegram to the Crown Prince, dated Bathelm, July 21, 1914.

"I have just received the enclosed telegram from the Imperial Chancellor. I appeal to your reason to reflect how terribly embarrassing and painful it must be for me to see that you, despite the promises you made to me, are again forcing the Chancellor, by your conduct, to submit such a request to me.

"I appeal furthermore, to your sense of honor and duty as a Prussian officer who must unconditionally keep his promises, and I most firmly expect that you will in the future—and most especially now in view of the tense situation—desist at once from any and all political utterances toward a third party—utterances which are only calculated to interfere with my own and my responsible advisers' policies.

"PAPA WILHELM."

The following day Count Wedel, personal adjutant to the Kaiser, informed Bethmann-Hollweg by telegraph that the following message had just been received by the Emperor:

"Orders shall be obeyed.

"WILHELM. KRONPRINZ."

TRAIN KILLS QUINCY MAN AT WOLLASTON STATION

The body of the man killed at the Wollaston Station by the locomotive of the 8:10 train from Boston, was identified as that of Timothy J. Shea, a resident of West Quincy, and the son of Mrs. Mary Shea of Larry Place.

TROOPS TO PLAY POLO AT FORT ETHAN ALLEN

Officers and enlisted men will be instructed how to play polo at Fort Ethan Allen and Camp Devens, it was announced to army headquarters by and ready to play.

Major Vernon W. Hall, recreational and educational officer of the Northeastern Department. The only drawback to the delay in getting the equipments for the game. The mounts are ready and many of the men are eager

Major Hall in speaking of this game said: "It is the development of good horsemanship, skill and daring on the part of the men in handling horses under difficulties, and I do not know a better game for men at a cavalry post or camp."

As Influenza is so exaggerated form of Grip, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets should be taken at larger doses, than is prescribed for ordinary Grip. A good plan is not to wait until you get sick, but PREVENT IT by taking LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets in time.—Advt.

RAYMOND'S

Going through the Clothing store this morning I heard a strange noise, not like most any noise I ever heard before; couldn't think what it was; searched high and low for it and all at once discovered it came from a big pile of overcoats and you'd never in the Lord's world guess what caused it. You see there are so many different kinds, homely, ugly, unsightly, hideous, cross grained, refractory, uncomely hard-looking patterns all mixed together that even the coats couldn't stand the pressure, so they got agoing, so I made up my mind to get the darned things out o here mighty quick and if you're not afraid of being kept awake nights on account of it, you'd better see 'em 'cause the cloth inem is the good old fashioned kind that'll wear 'till you're sick of it and the price is a joke.

SAYS WAR GAVE IMPETUS TO EDUCATION

James A. Moyer Calls Attention to Increase in University Extension

That the world war cultivated a desire for more education, is the opinion of James A. Moyer, head of the enrollment division of the Massachusetts Department of Education, Division of University Extension, given in the fifth annual report issued today.

This report gives an outline of the many branches of education into which the courses of the division ramifies. It includes cooking, conversational French, fuel saving, navigation, applied educational psychology and many other courses.

The report states in part: "The Americanization work is one of the most important and valuable functions of the division during this period of readjustment. It carried on in close co-operation with public school authorities, immigration officials and other agencies, including influential representatives of the foreign-born.

"Since January, 1916, 28,457 students have been given instruction in many subjects by the Division of University Extension. Of this total the correspondence enrollment was 9,333.

"The war naturally prevented many from finishing their courses, but since the establishment of the division 2,531 students have completed courses. During the last year the number of students who received instruction by class and correspondence was 17,142.

"Enrollments received since the war indicate that the war cultivated a desire in many for more instruction."

A conversational Spanish class will be held at the Boston Public Library this Winter under the direction of the division. Enrollments will start tomorrow at the office of the division in the State House. The course will include twenty lessons.

F. P. SHUMWAY AGENCY ENLARGES ITS OFFICES

The steadily increasing volume of advertising and merchandising contracts executed by the Franklin P. Shumway Company has necessitated a considerable enlargement of the suite of offices at No. 453 Washington street. Thirty-nine years ago this business was founded by Franklin P. Shumway, its president. Today it is not only one of the oldest, but also one of Boston's largest advertising agencies, handling both local and national advertising and also executing export advertising contracts for many large manufacturers who are building up a prosperous business in foreign countries. The Franklin P. Shumway Company, as an association of expert advertising, merchandising and business counsellors, serving the industrial, financial and commercial fields, is a carefully organized, ably conducted and amply financed advertising agency, and as such will surely continue to grow and expand along the tried lines that have led to its present high degree of success.

Miss Venita Fitzhugh, Opera Star, Killed in Auto Accident

Venita Fitzhugh, noted singer, victim of fatal accident.

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—Miss Venita Fitzhugh, aged twenty-four, who became a first firmament stage star overnight in 1913 when she appeared in "The Marriage Market," was killed here while returning from a New Year's celebration in an automobile driven by William A. Clader, a public accountant.

Miss Fitzhugh had been visiting Mr. Clader's mother since she returned from a theatrical engagement in England. The car skidded on the Walnut street bridge, crashed into the rail and threw Miss Fitzhugh over the rail and down to the Pennsylvania railroad tracks below. Her skull was fractured and she was instantly killed.

Miss Fitzhugh was greeted by critics as a distinct "find" when she first appeared in "The Marriage Market," singing the role of Mariposa Gilroy. Previously she appeared in minor roles.

CLOTHING TRADE IN NEW YORK FACING CRISIS

New York, Jan. 2.—With the government attempting to force down clothing prices, a crisis was said today to be imminent in the cloak and suit industry as a result of the alleged failure of union workers to live up to an agreement made with the employers. The employers charge that forty-two cloak and suit making shops are tied up by strikes, and contend that if they are compelled to grant another wage increase it will necessitate raising prices of cloaks and suits. They say the workers are earning from $35 to $75 weekly.

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Adaline Whitcomb, widow of Benjamin Whitcomb, has reached the century mark in her age. She enjoys remarkable health and takes great interest in the affairs of the day.

BLASTED HOPES DROVE GIRL TO DEATH

Miss Christie in Remarkable Farewell Note Tells How Ill-Health Wrecked Her Life

"Tell mother and father of my great love, and tell all those dear to me as friends of my sincere appreciation of their efforts in assisting me. I am now too miserable to go on."

With these words Miss Agnes Christie, who committed suicide by taking chloroform in the Brooke House, South End, concluded a letter of deepest pathos, in which she related the hopes and ideals which spurred her life's ambitions, but which were blasted by ill-health.

"I've tried so hard to succeed—to do something worth while," it reads, "but I've made such a muddle of things. I don't blame anyone for this. Everybody has helped me all they could."

The note in its opening lines related how overwork in her chosen field had robbed Miss Christie time and again of opportunities to carry on labors which brought no worldly gain to herself.

In other paragraphs she laments that she was unable to "carry on" like her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Christie, who as missionaries have been abroad for thirty years, and in a like manner her sister, who recently left for Europe to undertake similar work.

How her studies at Mt. Holyoke College were cut short and how her humanitarian studies and labors at St. Luke's and Mt. Sinai Hospitals in New York had been interrupted by her weakening condition were told in the note.

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 2.—All printing pressmen, bookbinders and job printers throughout this city went on strike today.

ROWDIES ATTACK OFFICER, TAKE PRISONER

Patrolman Lawless of Charlestown Roughly Handled by Group of Celebrators

Patrolman Lawless, one of the new policemen, attached to the Charlestown station, was roughly handled by a crowd of young men on Marion street, Charlestown, and a prisoner he had placed under arrest was taken away from him.

The officer was not injured and succeeded in getting hold of a cap which one of the boys lost in his flight. The boys were celebrating the entrance of the New Year, when the officer appeared on the scene and placed one of them under arrest.

Several other officers in the "Point" section of the district have had prisoners taken away from them recently, Patrolman O'Connor having been the victim on two occasions. One morning, a few weeks ago, the gang staged a "fake" fight and one of them ran and got an officer. When the new policeman appeared on the scene, he placed the boy, who was standing in Hayes square in his shirt sleeves, under arrest. The officer started for the patrol box and the gang rushed him, forcing him to let the prisoner go.

JUDGE BLODGETT TAKES UP DUTIES OF COURT

Framingham, Jan. 2.—Judge Edward W. Blodgett, recently appointed, sat in Framingham District Court today for the first time. He is a practicing attorney of Framingham and Boston, and succeeds Judge Willard Kingsbury, resigned. Judge Blodgett is forty-two years old and a graduate of Williams College and Boston University Law School.

400,000 'FACING HUNGER,' PLAN TO STRIKE

Railway Workers to Go Out Unless Conditions Improve, Says Leader

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A strike of 400,000 railroad maintenance of way employes and shop laborers is "imminent within a month," unless immediate steps are taken to increase wages or to reduce the cost of living, according to J. H. Malloy, grand vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Maintenance of Way Employes and Shop Laborers.

"It is a question of the men starving on the job or starving on a strike," said Malloy. "Many of them are making as low as twenty-eight cents an hour and it is impossible to live on such wages. The union took a strike vote and decided on a strike November 1 last. The strike action was postponed for sixty days on the promise that the cost of living would be reduced. Now the government must either show activity to lower price cost or give the men a decent living wage or we cannot hold the men another month."

Director-General Hines promised Allen Barker, president of the union, that he would give answer to the wage demands of the men within a few days. Malloy indicated that the men would brook no delay if the answer was not forthcoming at the time promised.

The union represents 85 per cent. of all the trackmen, roundhouse laborers and other maintenance of way and shop laborers on the railroads, Malloy stated.

A strike of the union men, he said, would practically tie up the railroad systems as in many sections it would be impossible to fill the vacancies caused by the walkout.

STRONG DEMAND FOR DAYLIGHT SAVING

20,000 Ballots Already Called for in Commerce Chamber's Straw Vote

In order to obtain a general expression of opinion upon the proposed daylight saving law for Massachusetts, as introduced by Representative W. E. Monk, the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce has begun a State-wide referendum upon the question.

The interest shown in fifty cities and towns of the State is surprisingly keen, 20,000 ballots having been sent out upon request already. The industries of the State seem especially interested, many of them having arranged to take a poll of their employes.

QUESTION VOTED UPON.

The question being voted upon is: "Shall the proposal for a daylight saving law in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to be effective from 2 o'clock ante-meridian of the last Sunday in April each year to 2 o'clock ante-meridian of the last Sunday in each following September, be approved?"

Arguments for and against daylight saving are presented to set forth as briefly as possible the chief advantages and disadvantages commonly advanced by proponents and opponents of the measure.

One of the ten arguments in favor is: "Unless the Commonwealth adopts a daylight saving measure, it is inevitable that numerous municipalities within the State will adopt statutes locally for daylight saving. To avoid the confusion and annoyances arising from varying time schedules throughout the State, it is highly desirable that the law should be of uniform application. Local statutes have been passed already by the cities of Worcester and Marlboro and are under advisement in many other places."

ARGUMENT OF OPPONENTS.

As against this the opponents say: "The law should be national in application or not at all, otherwise much inconvenience may be caused to travelers and business interests, due to varying time schedules in different States. Through the Congress of the United States the country has expressed its disapproval of daylight saving for the nation. Massachusetts should accept that decision and consider that it should not adopt such a measure for itself without consideration for neighboring States."

It is already apparent that the agricultural interests of the State, acting through the Grange and other organizations, are to organize a strong opposition to legislative action, even though the period of "daylight saving" is somewhat curtailed over that of the past two years.

The ballot is returnable to the Massachusetts Chamber on or before January 21 and several hundred have been sent in already.

Germany's Morale Strengthened by France's Fear

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—France's fear is Germany's tonic. Every time France gives a new shiver of anxiety concerning a possible revival of the German military machine, or proposes new plans for hobbling or crippling German reconstruction, the mercury mounts in the thermometer of Germany's morale.

After the armistice morale was the lowest thing in Germany. As the German looked around and saw no food, no heat, no work, dirty streets, tattered and undisciplined soldiers, the bloodshed of war between civil political parties, he concluded with a groan that Germany was the weakest and most disorganized country on the face of the earth.

CONVINCED OF POWER.

When the allied press began to print stories that Bolshevism was a campaign to fool their enemies controlled by the German Imperialists who let loose their forces in Russia; when they began to print stories about a "Bryan program" would spring to arms overnight, and attack the allies, the Germans laughed and called the allied foole to become so excited over what they themselves considered preposterous impossibilities.

But such tales have been circulated day after day for a year. German editors eagerly clip them from allied newspapers and reprint them. The allies' persistent advertising of Germany's strength and power in hoping nothing to convince the German himself.

"These people fear us so sincerely that there must be some cause for it," the German reasons to himself. "Perhaps we are not so far down and 'out' as we think we are. Things look pretty dark, but perhaps we have been too pessimistic."

And so the German has begun to take heart.

SPIRIT NO LONGER BROKEN

A year ago Germany was broken. Its national spirit was crushed. The fatherland was spoken of only in the past tense, but the uninterested observer in Berlin believes that one cannot blame the Germans for taking heart after listening for a year to the propaganda of allied orators and writers that are insisting that Germany is still a power to be reckoned with; is still resourceful, efficient, militaristic; and is still a force of danger to the world. Germany has begun to believe that she has taken her defeat too seriously and really amounts to something after all.

The German talks little of revenge on the French, but he talks much of the ridiculousness of French, who, he believes, is running with no one pursuing. If a few Germans are talking about clearing the left bank of the Rhine before fifteen years have elapsed, they believe it is because to have their own desperate but widely advertised "economic-protect-ourselves" policy to thank for it.

The apparent fear of the French has impressed the Germans. They are beginning to believe that, like Joshua at Jericho, they have only to shout to cause their enemies to fall over.

PROPAGANDA KEPT UP.

The degree to which the French have carried their bobbling of German policy amuses, but at the same time it irritates some Germans. The closing of turnvereins, the forbidding if calisthenics, the punishment of school teachers who allow their pupils to march in drill exercises, all furnish grist to the propaganda mill which is reawakening the national consciousness.

Whether or not the allies are becoming aware of the change of spirit in Germany, it is plain. But any student of conditions in this country can see the effect. The intelligence department of the allied governments in Berlin are sending out reports, but it is believed that no special emphasis is being laid upon the awakening of the German belief in German power.

CAR SERVES AS STATION IN EAST LEXINGTON

Lexington, Jan. 2.—Passengers to and from East Lexington on the Boston & Maine Railroad have a novel "station" as a result of the burning, Christmas Eve, of the regular structure. Until the station has been repaired or a new structure erected a combination baggage and smoking car will be used for the station. The car has been backed onto the siding next to the station, and here Station Agent Henry W. Preston has his office. The seats in the car are used by the passengers while waiting for trains. Several hundred board trains from this station each day.

BRITON SEEKING U.S. AID FOR EUROPE

Extension of Credits and an International Bond Issue Are Wanted

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 2.—"I have come to this country to try to arrange the extension of provisional credits to certain European countries which are in need and also to obtain the consent of financial interests and government officials to an international bond issue," said Sir George Paish, famous British economist, in explaining today the object of his visit to the United States.

"The money derived from the sale of these bonds would be used to rehabilitate the countries which are badly in need as a result of the war. So far as I know there is no opposition in European circles to seek any loan from the United States government. My statements to that effect, which have lately been published in the press of this country are untrue.

"The truth is that European financiers realize that something must be done at once to meet the deplorable situation rising throughout the world as a result of the war. The European countries have little or no money left with which to purchase food and raw materials. Of course, I am referring to certain countries on the Continent, not to Great Britain, which can get the materials she needs from her dependencies."

Sir George had previously been quoted as saying that he was here to secure a loan the size of which "would stagger the world."

BISHOP HUGHES SPEAKS FOR TROTTER

Evangelist Who Will Lead Tremont Temple Revival Will Be Here Tonight

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Methodist Church opened the eight-day evangelistic campaign in Tremont Temple today. "Evangelist" Mel Trotter, who will speak at this evening's meeting, did not arrive in time for the noon meeting, and his place was taken by the bishop.

Bishop Hughes pleaded for courage, which he claimed fosters upon great principles.

"When we think of courage, we are driven to think of Marquis Lafayette, who was a soldier on conviction, and we have to look to men like Charles Lee, who at this same time was a soldier of fortune," said the Bishop.

"We honor Lafayette because he had back of him great principles, but the courage of Charles Lee has had back of it selfishness. You will find that the honest boys who came from shops and stores did better work in the war than those who were known to be thugs and blacklegs around corners.

"What we need in soldiers is morals. Courage is back of that. True courage is the conquest of fear. No one goes into battle without a sense of tremor. You never heard of a man who ran into difficulties of any sort who did not shake or have this sense of fear. When in Paris, holding services with soldiers, I found out that they prayed like everything just before going into a battle.

"A man down at Fort Reilly, after entering the camp in the barracks, kept up his habit of praying, night and morning. The other men flung words and all sorts of missiles at him. This thing went on for some time. One night an officer heard this noise and knew at once the nature of it. They were trying to destroy the courage of that young man who was saying his prayers. But they didn't do it. He kept on amid flying missiles. He was afterwards made a sergeant. The man who can defend his principles in this way is the type of man we want to defend the Stars and Stripes."

POLICE RESENT 'DIRTY NECK' ORDERS

Action by Commissioner Curtis Has Caused Storm of Protest; Taken as 'Insult'

The famous general order which Police Commissioner Curtis issued a year ago, in the form of an address to the division commanders, failed to arouse any such indignation as has been stirred up by the "wash your neck" order of the present week.

The old order, which had to do with stealing peanuts and getting a side door drink, caused wrath, but nothing in comparison with the "dirty neck" order.

In Charlestown one policeman got so hot over the matter that a lad of twelve narrowly missed being arrested as a result of telling his brother of the means he had taken to fool his mother.

It appears that this Charlestown mother, who resides in Bunker Hill street, had ordered the youngster to take a bath. He creased her up by merely washing his face and neck, and then proudly informing her that he had gone through the ablutions.

It was this tale he unfolded as a new police officer walked by and overheard. Thoroughly angered, he got names and then heard the story over.

More thoroughly angered, he started down Bunker Hill street with the boy, intending to take him to the station. He altered his course, delivered himself of a lecture and sent the lad home. The boy's parent heard of the matter and was angry, but cooled down on reading the account of the general order.

The "wash your neck" order wasn't the only thing which caused dissension in the department this week. Nor are the new patrolmen the only persons incensed. Lieutenants have been ordered to do two hours' street duty each night, in civilian clothing. They are "sore" at the order, for they consider that when the new uniforms are ready they will appear under arms in full regimentals.

Wednesday night saw two more resignations from the department, and on the previous night there were five resignations and two discharges. None of these were made public.

Captains, lieutenants and sergeants have been ordered to be particularly careful about the men under them, and their appearance. If a man wears ear laps he must wear them on his ears and not on the sides of his cap. Shoes must be shined each day and uniforms must be ever free from dirt of any sort.

A school for new police officers, to teach them how to present cases in court, has been established in East Boston. Under the guidance of William C. Maguire, clerk of the East Boston district court, classes of twenty of the new officers will be drilled Monday and Tuesday nights in making out warrants, applying for and serving summonses and properly presenting evidence before the courts.

The classes include one man from each division for each night, and the present plan is to have every policeman attend at least one lecture.

The school, while not compulsory, has the backing of the department and every officer is expected to avail himself of the opportunity offered in getting the instruction in the rudiments of law.

TEN DRIVEN TO STREET BY FIRE IN QUINCY

Ten persons, including several young children, were driven to the street in their night clothing, and an elderly man who had been overcome by the smoke was carried out by another tenant of the house, during a fire in the two-family dwelling at No. 16 Edison street, Quincy, today.

The fire was discovered at about 1:30 a. m. It started between the walls and caused considerable smoke.

The first floor is occupied by Charles H. Sherbourne, the owner, with his wife, Carl H. Sherbourne, his son, and daughter, Helen A. Sherbourne.

When the fire was discovered all the members of the family on the first floor managed to reach the street in scant attire. Helen and her parents were partially overcome. They were assisted to the street by Carl.

After seeing his parents safely to the street, Carl rushed upstairs to the floor occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Sherbourne, their son, and their two young daughters, Barbara, eleven, and Miriam, four years of age, and William Roland, the seventy-five-year-old father of Mrs. Sherbourne.

He found such dense clouds of smoke that he was unable to proceed further.

He was obliged to crawl on his hands and knees to the apartment, where he assisted the members of the family to the stairs and then continued to the upper portion of the house, where he found the elderly man overcome by the smoke, managed to grasp him in his arms, and carried him through the smoke to the street.

Damage to the house amounted to about $1,000.

Cincinnati man discovers drug that loosens corns so they lift out.

Local druggists are having a tremendous call for freezone, the drug which is said to shrivel a corn, root and all, without any pain.

A few drops of freezone applied directly upon a tender, aching corn relieves the soreness at once, and shortly the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out with the fingers.

This new drug is being dispensed at small cost in quarter ounce bottles which is sufficient to take off every hard or soft corn from one's feet. It is a sticky substance which dries at once, and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue or skin. There is no excuse for anyone treating tender, by induction or lockjaw from cutting their corns now.—Advertisement.

CROWDS FIGHT TO GET OUT OF VIENNA

Women and Children Killed in Crush; Men Shoot Each Other at Trains

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 2.—Several women and children were killed in Vienna when thousands of persons stormed the railway station in an effort to flee from the city, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Daily Express today.

After Austria had been virtually isolated from the rest of the world for some time, the announcement was made at Vienna that a single train would leave over each of the main lines. Immediately a rush was started for the railway station by persons who sought to leave the city because of the famine conditions. Men armed with revolvers fought each other to get into the trains.

MASONS AT FUNERAL OF HENRY W. HARTWELL

Funeral services were held today for Henry W. Hartwell, eighty-six of No. 147 Summer street, Waltham, one of Boston's most prominent architects. Many organizations were represented among them several Masonic fraternities, Post 23, G. A. R., and various architectural associations. Rev. Dr. Joseph F. McCarthy, pastor of the First Parish Unitarian Church of Waltham, officiated. The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mary Hartwell, who resided with him. He was a member of the firm of Hartwell, Richardson & Driver, architects. Born in Boston in 1833, he studied architecture at Lawrence Academy, and was for a time connected with the Joseph Billing Company, architects. He then affiliated with Richardson & Driver. He was a past commander of St. Bernard's Commandery, Knights Templar, and was also the last surviving charter member of the Waltham Royal Arch Chapter. He was a 18° member of the Monitor Lodge of Masons, Waltham, and was the only member to receive the Henry Price medal for having belonged to the lodge for half a century.

Cost of Living Fails to Halt Cupid in Somerville

The high cost of living failed to handicap Cupid in Somerville last year for City Clerk Frederic W. Cook issued 275 more licenses than in 1918. The high wages and the return by many young men from the war are the reasons given by City Clerk Cook. There were 1,226 marriage licenses issued last year as against 947 in 1918.

There was a decrease of several hundred deaths as compared with 1918. During the year ending Wednesday night there were 1,064 deaths as against 1,532 in 1918. The large number in 1918 were due to the epidemic of influenza.

The city clerk issues an average of five marriage licenses each working day.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT MANY LOCAL CHURCHES

This we are very glad to do. We are glad to do it now because the Government asks it. We are glad to do it because these are the lines of goods we can conscientiously recommend—not alone now, but always.

And we are glad to do so, because these are just the lines of goods in which Filene Better Value-giving makes itself most strongly felt!

Filene's has always specialized on the plainer and more substantial grades of goods. Its reputation for lower prices is not only local but national.

This business was built upon moderate priced lines, is still being built upon them, and will continue to be built upon them.

The list of "plainer and more substantial grades of goods," of which you will find typical examples below, is not new to Filene's. A similar list might have been published last month, two months ago, or a year ago.

They are here all the time, for all the people. They are here because simpler styles are almost always in better taste. And they are here all the time because substantial grades are the only grades upon which a store can hope to build a permanent following of the type which throngs this store day in, day out.

Filene Better Values in "plainer and more substantial grades of goods in lower priced lines."

THE MIRACLE OF LOVE

By Cosmo Hamilton

CLIVE and Helena exchanged glances in which there was some irritation, some amusement, and a tacit agreement that this shrewd, good-natured woman, whose sentiment had not dribbled into mere sentimentality, could show them a way out of their maze.

All three sat down and Clive held Helena's hand.

"Now let me be perfectly frank with you two dear people," said Minnie Luxminster, leaning eagerly toward them. "I'm not goin' to tell you how I know, but I do know that you were goin' to take the law into your own hands last year and got as far as Dover. For your sakes I wish you'd been able to cross the channel and make an near an approach to a little heaven for yourselves somewhere as we are permitted to on this earth."

"So do I," said Clive, "for ever' reason." One of them was that George would then have been alive.

"But it wasn't to be — then. Very well, now let's see how things stand now, and what we can do to twist them into a shape that suits you best. I don't have to ask you if you love my dear girl. It's as plain as the nose on my face. The room shakes with it. And I know that honey loves you, otherwise she would never have been able to go living sanely with the black man. That goes without saying. Now, dear boy—excuse my calling you dear boy like that—what's your position? He candid with me. I'm your friend because I love this dear girl, and what you say will go no further than this room."

A Small Income

Clive needed this talk as a lonely sensitive man needs companionship on a long, hard road. For months he had argued with himself until his brain was like a whirlpool. He said: "I have no position. As a duke, I'm more or less a farcical figure. I haven't sufficient money to run enough servants at Sumptermead to keep the place clean. My income, and it's precious little, is drawn from rents, and it dwindles every year because the property is taxed out of existence. The house is horribly in need of repairs, inside and out, and I can't find anything to do that will bring in money. All I'm doing is to draw unwilling money for charity out of rich people on the strength of my title—and I simply loathe the snobbishness into account for my hospital and the poor little devils who haunt the streets. If I had enough money I would wait for Helena till —till——"

"The cows come home—of course you would. Having none, your people are urging you to marry money, as your brother had to, and so many other young men who have grown like sheep in shoes. Is that it?"

"Yes," said Clive. "Exactly."

"But how about all the money old Cranston settled on your poor brother? Hasn't that gone into the family pot?"

Clive shook his head. "It was settled on George for his lifetime and goes to his children."

"Ah, bad luck and bad barrain! If I'd been George I'd have had it settled on the estate. And so, here you are, markin' time, aching for Helena, whose tied to that detestable creature at Cardinale, and doing your job as best you can, with clean hands and clean conscience. You look it, through and through. There's no coal on your place, by any chance?"

No Assets

"Not a nob," said Clive.

"Nor a drop of oil?"

Clive shook his head. An old house, full of valuable things that can't be sold, and a park full of old trees. That's all."

"Um!" said Lady Luxminster. "The country's shot about ten thousand miles beyond you dukes, hasn't it? We're no longer a monarchy surrounded by aristocracy and sanctioned by patriots. We're simply a democracy that tolerates a monarch. Well, it's pretty obvious then, unless you find Tom Tiddler and wheedle him into givin' you the run of his ground, or can smile a philanthropist who isn't wedded to the building of unnecessary libraries in places that would give their ears not to have them out of a large lump sum, you must put yourself on the matrimonial market to the highest bidder—because you can't ask the government to take over your house as a museum—it isn't yours, and you can't sell it, because you only hold it in trust for your oldest son.

"That's the position," said Clive.

"And even if you wait until the devil takes Harwich you can't marry Helena, because all his money will go to the person who succeeds him."

Clive put Helena's hand to his lips, and there was a moment's silence in the rather pretentious room.

"Well," said Minnie, looking from one wistful face to the other, "there are two ways o' stretchin' out in front of you young people. One leads to what those crack-jaw French people call a sul-de-sac, and the other . . ."

"Where?" said Helena eagerly, speaking for the first time in that strange interview.

"Heaven, honey."

"Well!" asked Clive.

Strong Advice

"Along the first one you can both go, alone, with some miles of cold space dividing you. True, you will both be able to wear the martyr's crests and admire yourselves for having resisted temptation, and played the game and done all the other things that armchair moralists would have you do. Result—discontent and eventually two warped and maimed lives and the loss of children born well to posterity. Along the other you go together, but like so many other poor devils of human beings have had to do—surreptitiously. You will snatch at joy, take what you will never, never find again, and you will with the utmost circumspection, and obeying all the damn fool laws of convention, join the ranks of the great lovers. There you have it in a nutshell. And, in heaven's name, what harm will you do? You will set a bad example to bad people and a good example to good ones. I hear people say Harwich. Well, what about him? How can he count in the scheme of things—a debauchee, with two feet in the grave. A man for whom the lethal chamber is the right and appropriate place.

"Don't, in any case, stop one single minute to consider Harwich. Wather ye rosebuds while ye may—I don't know the rest, but it's good and true, and what I say is this: If you don't adapt yourselves to life, adapt life to yourselves. You only have it once. Take it and make it while it's yours. You'll be doing no one any harm and yourselves great good."

Clive got up and walked about the room. This woman summed up the position as he had summed it up a thousand times. In the middle of the night, on long lonely walks, sitting in his place in the House of Lords while men talked whenever his thoughts turned to the great question that filled his life—these two ways had always been the windup of his mental argument. He must live without Helena or with her on the sly. He must merely love her and marry someone else, or love her and take her * * * and marry someone else.

A Great Temptation

He was assailed by a temptation that crushed all his idealism, scattered all his patience like chaff before a tornado. Good God! why should he endeavor to pose as a sort of angel in the world which half his brothers made life suit their purposes and were not the mere timorous servants of life? Why should he watch youth and passion and the exquisite joy of love fade and die because Providence had placed him in a position in which he was an anomaly, to which he was temperamentally utterly unsuited, and in which he was asked to sacrifice his liberty of choice—the one person he held dearest on earth? Why? This woman was shrewd, sensible and good.

In her was represented at least half the opinion of the world. She stood for individualism. Her creed was that every man should make his own bed and lie on it, and God help us all. She urged courageous immorality and help up to scorn the mental immoralist who feared to break the laws because of what people would say. She was not so blind to the simple facts as to put forward the feeble, anaemic theory that life for men and women contained better things than love and the desire to create. . . . She would help. Her house would be at their disposal. He could put off a marriage of convenience until the last possible moment, meet Helena as often as could be arranged at the villa at St. Malo, and do the uttermost justice to youth and the high romance that goes with a great, urgent love.

And while he paced, aflame and thirsty, unable any longer to endure the bonds of duty and convention, Helena sat very still, with her hands held tightly by the woman who would have given so much to be her mother, and yet who held up before her the allurement and the glamour of self-indulgence.

Through her starved mind all Clive's thoughts were running helter-skelter. She loved and desired him. She needed his constant presence and the warmth and comfort of his arms. The maternal instinct in her pined unbearably for his children. She was passionately jealous of his absence.

And when Clive went suddenly to her side—the closeness of him firing her body and making her tremble—she drew her hands away from Lady Luxminster, rose and went into his arms and gave him her eyes to read.

The woman with the blazing hair and the golden heart left them together.

Clive read, but refused to believe.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"I love you," she said.

"Well enough to break vows and risk the loss of respect?"

"I love you utterly," she said.

"And then to see me go to another woman and give her my children?"

"I love you with all my soul," she said, but she quivered as if struck.

"Then let's take all that life can give while we can."

"I love you," she said.

* * * * *

The following afternoon a dogcart met Clive and Essendine at the new red-brick station, with its advertisements of soap, tobacco and black-lead, and its paper stall covered with unspeakable cigarettes and packets of chocolate, a collection of cheap editions of old novels, all dog-eared and soiled, and a mass of illiterate, illustrated garbage that proved into what an abyss of inanity the great public had fallen.

Jerry-Built Town

Essendine eyed curiously the rapid, jerry-built, ill-considered spread of the town through which they drove, noting the remnants of the little old, solid, sleepy place that had been so familiar to him in his youth.

He waved his hand. "The same story everywhere," he said. "In place of historic House of Lords, which acts as a buffer against the jerry-built measures of charlatans and party politicians, the democrats would erect a red-brick debating hall to train men to politics who ought to be honest carpenters and plumbers.

"Here they've fastened on your old village, scrapped the fine old houses, mainly because they are fine, and run up five little hideous, ill-drained rabbit warrens on the site of one good serviceable house, and desecrated the streets with an electric tramway that cannot pay its expenses.

"It's down with the old and good, and up with new and cheap today. God help this country! The inevitable swing of the pendulum, I suppose. The tide rises slowly to its fall, pauses and turns. England is going down with the tide. . . . Don't you care for motors, Clive?"

Clive laughed a little ruefully. "Rather!" he said. "But we can't run to one these days."

Essendine nodded sympathetically. "If the spirit of your grandfather ever walks round the old house in the silent hours before sunrise, it must be with a very pricking conscience. Your father told me once that he not only gambled away every available shilling that he could lay his hands on, but sold the village, which by some curious mischance was not entailed, to the speculative builder. But for him. . . ."

DECLINES TO APPROVE VERMONT BRIDGE AWARD

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 2.—Governor Clement has declined to approve payment by the State of $6,660 for the elimination of a toll bridge between Vermont and New Hampshire, at Waterford, on the grounds that it is only a four-ton bridge. He has suggested that a conference between the New Hampshire and Vermont State engineers be held to ascertain if the bridge can be strengthened.

LOWELL YOUTH ACCIDENTALLY KILLS CHUM

Carelessly Handles 22-Calibre Rifle and Shot Enters Boy's Head, Causing Death

Lowell, Jan. 2.—Carelessly flingering a 22-calibre rifle, William J. Smith, aged fourteen, of No. 26 Blanche street, accidentally shot and killed his playmate, John W. Scott, aged fifteen, son of Samuel Scott, a wholesale tobacco dealer. The bullet from the weapon entered the Scott boy's head and he died on the way to St. John's Hospital.

The fatality occurred at the Scott home, No. 220 Appleton street. The Scott boy invited Smith ad another playmate, John F. Harrington, aged fourteen, of No. 8 Appleton place, to his residence, to view a electrical apparatus which he had received as a Christmas present.

While Scott was explaining the workings of the apparatus to Harrington, the Smith boy examined the rifle. Thoughtlessly aiming the weapon, his finger touched the trigger and the rifle was discharged.

TO MAKE CHANGES AT AMERICAN FORUM

At the regular monthly meeting of the general committee, who run the American Forum every Sunday night at Faneuil Hall, the committee voted unanimously to continue their meetings for the promotion of Americanism each week as heretofore, the program for the meetings to remain the same, except in one particular.

The community singing has been very favorably commented upon. Under the leadership of George S. Dane, with Mrs. Morgan and Miss Hutchinson to sing and Miss Candage and Miss Roberts to play, it is doing great good.

The principal addresses of each Sunday night will be delivered by prominent speakers on important and interesting subjects. After the address, the period usually devoted to questions and four-minute talks from the audience will hereafter be entirely devoted to questions. Some subject, as heretofore, will be voted on, but there will be no opportunity for speeches, except from the platform, by speakers selected by the forum committee. It is believed by the committee that this change is necessary to have the forum conform to its original purpose of promoting the brotherhood of humanity and maintaining the spirit of the American Constitution.

At the next meeting on Sunday night, January 4, at 7:30, Professor Harvey A. Wooster of Tufts College will speak on "Democracy and Collective Bargaining." After the address there will be a full hour given to questions.

PREDICT CHEAP ICE IN LAWRENCE NEXT SUMMER

Lawrence, Jan. 2.—According to some local ice dealers the price of ice is apt to be lower in Lawrence next Summer due to the weather conditions, which have allowed dealers to hope for a big ice crop here next week. Both the Merrimack river and Lake Cochickewick, North Andover, are reported to have thick ice which will be ready for cutting immediately.

A prominent ice dealer is authority for the statement that the Winter price announced this week will probably prevail during the Summer months. This means a drop of 20 cents per hundred from the price formerly charged, making wholesale ice sell at 40 cents per hundred and retail at 60 cents.

JAP EVANGELIST COMING; MAKES 3-HOUR SERMONS

The Rev. Kanamori, the Japanese evangelist, who will soon conduct meetings in Boston, preaches for three hours at a time. His famous sermon is divided into three parts: God, sin and salvation. He will tell here of his conversion to Christianity due to the death of his wife, leaving him and nine motherless children in sorrow and despair.

He has only one sermon with different heads, but the preacher this night after night with good effect, according to the record which has reached Boston from other parts of the country.

HAIR SOON TOO SHORT TO DO UP

A little "Danderine" stops your hair coming out and doubles its beauty

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of Knowlton's "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Help your hair to grow strong, thick and long and become soft, glossy and twice as beautiful and abundant.—Advertisement.

WARNS LAYMEN TO BEWARE OF SPIRITUALISM

Should Shun Trafficking in the Occult, Says Ralph Adams Cram

Boston and the United States, following apparently the lead of England, is all agog over Spiritualism. From parlor seances, in polite homes down from Beacon Hill, to little back parlors where poor women, with husky voices and grief in their hearts, pay twenty-five cents a sitting to mediums for information about loved ones who are gone, the craze seethes, and the city forgets itself.

Ralph Adams Cram, world famous architect, writer, thinker, investigator into psychical matters, sounds a warning to these Spiritualist-mad persons. "It is not for me as a layman, this investigation," says he. "To pursue such subjects is to weaken your resistance to temptation and to give the devils a chance at you, when you are weakest."

COMMENDS CATHOLIC STAND.

Mr. Cram commends the Catholic Church for its stand in the matter. He first defines the spiritual state of Boston today.

More than twenty million devils are hammering at the sons of men with exceeding great temptation, says he. No wonder the professors prosper, nor that fathers and mothers turn to Spiritualism for comfort when we consider the war losses of the past four years, and the losts of "diplomacy," good, indifferent and evil, cast off by so many millions of premature war deaths.

The world is going to the bad very fast these days, Mr. Cram explains, for these aforementioned devils or daimons are pressing round the inhabitants of these terrestrial spheres madly, eager to get back into the flesh, weakening our resistance to evil, by their hammering onslaughts.

IS NOT A SPIRITUALIST.

It was at the architect's office at No. 15 Beacon street that Mr. Cram, a careful specialist in psychical matters, explained for the lay understanding some important phases of Spiritualism.

"In the first place" he expounded, "please understand that I am no Spiritualist, nor a believer in Spiritualism, in the sense that Sir Oliver Lodge and Hall King are believers. These gentlemen have their communication with departed dear ones, may be established. For myself, I believe that they have gotten into a medium with a dead one.

"This first, then, I answer unanswerable question Sir Oliver's answer? I do so far as to believe that he has spoken with a departed soul. But it is not the real spirit, nor the real soul of his son. It is rather a ghoulish off-spring, lower, if higher than the material body. Or rather than the soul, which embodies the record of consequential earthly happenings. This memory record is a compound, an accumulation of renewing with the real soul of the here or in the hereafter, would not concern itself.

DISSOLUTION OF PERSONALITY.

Mr. Cram then expounded the dissolution of the earthly self. "The second is the soul. That because it is the proper sphere which carries us not to man to know. The third is the record memory records to form a sub soul recorder here on earth of matters too low for it really to concern itself with.

"This record is, after death, thrust about on earth, intermingling with millions of other memory records of persons who have crossed to join the great majority.

"The influence of these records may be good evil, or indifferent. They may mingle with one another, so that the records of a good man, made perfect, may be all but drowned with those of a most accomplished villain.

Mr. Cram then explained a little more about these records. "You may call them 'devils,' says he. "But the Greek equivalent for them, to borrow a word from antiquity, is 'daimon,' often with added sense of imp or inspiration. These devils or daimons, are what animated conscienceless nymphs in Hellenic forests long ago, or in the swine caused that famous Biblical descent into the sea. Which led to the logical remark.

EXORCISTS NEEDED.

"What we need today here in these United States of America is exorcists (ritually), good men with power to cast out the devils that so cruelly, it pet us with temptation. For devils of all sorts are temptations, and temptation are daimons. Then a man's among the most virulent these crusaders are often most cruelly beset with devils just as those pious saints of old, St. Anthony, Martin, Jerome and Guthbill read a lot the days of their namesakes. I, as did they, find I was set devils

'POISON PEN' NOTES SENT TO NEW YORK HEIRESS

Revolting letters to Miss Lorena Carroll, heiress of $1,000,000, have aroused her mother to threaten legal action. Miss Carroll, as the photograph shows, is still in her teens.

New York, Jan. 2—Poison-pen letters are being sent to Miss Lorena Carroll, New York's nineteen-year-old million-dollar heiress.

If they do not cease, Mrs. Mattie L. Carroll, the girl's mother, will spend a tidy sum to trace the writers and have them punished. Mrs Carroll said

"Ever since stories were published in the newspapers about my daughter's $15,000 a year income, and the $1,000,000 she will inherit when she becomes of age we have been pestered by these scurrilous letters.

"Most of the letters have been coming since the Surrogate's Court refused our appeal to increase Lorena's present from $5,000 a year to $25,000."

Mrs. Carroll recently announced the engagement of her daughter to Dr. Peyton Randolph Tuthill, a wealthy clubman. The marriage is to take place in the fall. Miss Carroll graduated from the Ogontz School, Ogontz P.O. where she is now finishing an extra year of studies. Mrs. Carroll said:

"Some of the letters we have received have come to us from which almost made her ill so exciting it has been. The latter we have kept and have turned it over to my lawyers. If many of these unprintable ones will, I shall leave nothing undone to run down the writers and have them punished.

The letters have come from all over the country, but most of them seem to have been mailed in New York. Some are vulgar. Ads and others gave names of girls of college

HARD TO LIVE ON $25,000.

"All of them take Lorena to task because her father left her an income. Well, you would think it was the girl's fault.

Lorena, herself, is the widow of Joseph D. Carroll, Tammany politician and fun-loving youth.

Lorena, who here proved a somewhat shy, fascinating pretty miss whose curls break looks frame a delicate oval face. Her eyes are a luminous brown, and her vivid lips are to show the whitest of teeth when she smiles. She was simply bewitching in a suit of blue serge. Concerning her allowance, she said:

"It's awful hard to live on $15,000 a year. I am quite sure I would not know what to do if I got less, but I might be able to manage rather well with a little more than $20,000."

"I am sure my husband would have increased Lorena's allowance if he could have foreseen the rise in prices," said Mrs. Carroll. "Lorena is far from an extravagant child. She never gets she cares little for fancy dress, jewelry and expensive parties. She is an outdoor girl and literally her daddy's love for horses.

WHY GIRL NEEDS MORE.

"The bill we presented to the surrogate included $5,000 for the support of Lorena's limousine, $3,000 for toilette articles, $2,000 for jewelry and clothes, $2,000 for education and church contributions, $1,000 for travel and pleasure; $1,000 for physicians, dentists and opticians, $2,000 for rent and $4,000 for household expenses.

"I don't believe in youthful marriages. However, the two children will never have to worry, and that may mean a lot toward their happiness. We all make mistakes, but that is the only way we can learn. Why! We learn things after people are dead."

BRITISH IN 1898 STOOD BY AMERICA

Backed Monroe Doctrine and Warned Other Nations, Says Pollock

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 2—A hidden chapter in American history, showing that Great Britain was ready to intervene on the side of the United States during the Spanish-American war and uphold the Monroe Doctrine was revealed today by Sir Frederick Pollock, famous authority on international law and a member of the British Privy Council.

Sir Frederick is one of the foremost members of the British bar and assisted in drawing up the indictment against the ex Kaiser.

His revelation regarding America's attitude in 1898 was made in the course of an interview in which he strongly defended the League of Nations covenant.

"I notice that there has been considerable criticism in America regarding the Monroe Doctrine and I believe, have been made that there is some sense that England might take advantage of the League of Nations covenant to bring the doctrine to an end. I wonder if Americans are aware of the fact that England always stood ready to back the right of the United States to enforce the Monroe Doctrine when the other continental powers did not do so.

"Nor do I suppose it is generally known that during the Spanish-American War of 1898 England backed the United States in this matter of the Monroe Doctrine. There was a conference of European powers and it was then suggested that pressure should be applied to America in order to force her to agree to pernicious warfare with Spain.

"The other European powers were plainly told by England that if America was interfered with it would result in the intervention of England on America's side and that instead of America being alone against Europe it would be England and the United States side by side.

AUTO REGISTRY SHOWS 100,000 TO DATE

General Rush for 1920 Plates; Pleasure Car List Totals 80,000

Eighty thousand pleasure vehicles and 20,000 motorcycles of other varieties have been registered to date out of 300,000 motor-propelled conveyances in the State.

These were the statistics announced by the State Department of Public Works today, while a long line of those who had come to make early applications awaited their turn in a slowly moving procession to the windows from which the necessary registration numbers were dealt.

Statistically it is a [illegible] for the Bay State. In approximate numbers it leaves one car for each twelve inhabitants, and Boston has the brunt of it herself.

Overflow offices were opened up for the registration of those who flocked into the city to collect their 1920 plates.

ARNOLD HORWEEN, BIG STAR OF HARVARD-OREGON BATTLE

By CHARLES E. PARKER

(Boston American expert who made the coast-to-coast trip with the Harvard team.)

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.—Eastern college football team, minus its greatest lineman and but scarcely recovered from its 4,000 mile journey across the continent, achieved a 7-to-6 victory over the sturdy sons of Oregon, recognized champions of the Far West.

Never was a more stirring game witnessed than that which 35,000 frenzied football fans, drawn to Pasadena from all sections of the land, witnessed.

The narrow margin of victory indicates the vicious opposition offered by the men of the Northwest. But it scarcely suggests the story of Harvard's brilliant uphill fight; Harvard's equally thrilling defensive play, or Harvard a great drive of eighty yards which was checked in the last play of the game with the ball but six inches from Oregon's goal line.

Every point scored in the game was registered in the brief fifteen minutes of the second period of play. Oregon taking the lead when Bill Steers, its greatest backfield man, drove a field goal from the 25-yard line. Harvard sailing the advantage after a brilliant drive of 65 yards to a touchdown and goal from touchdown; Oregon drawing to within one point of Harvard's total on a drop-kicked goal by Scester Manerud, the midget player of the Northwestern team.

Despite the clustering of the scoring plays, however, not a bull movement came in the entire two hours of the contest, for three times in the third and fourth period did Oregon easy field goals, while twice in that time Harvard seemed sure of scoring touchdowns.

Oregon players, who with comparative ease had bettered the team from Pennsylvania in 1917, and who, because of the ease in which that victory was scored, blustered about the superiority of Far Western football, were given the surprise of their lives by the Crimson army from Cambridge.

PAID IN OWN COIN.

When the Westerners sought to make the game a rough one as they did against the out-of-condition Pennsylvania players, they found Harvard's men knew something of that type of play. And despite Oregon's shorter trip and much longer period of Pasadena training, it was the Harvard team that possessed the advantage in power and drive throughout the final period of play.

Arnold Horween, the midget one hundred and unheralded and unsung and wo all season long, was shunted from one to another position in the Crimson lineup, was the big man of the Harvard attack in that final thirty-yard drive of the Crimson. Arnold Horween carried the ball on all but three yards of the twenty-eight yards he gained many-seven. It was on his defensive play, however, that he served Harvard the greatest stead. His alert following of the ball and his vicious tackling figured more than anything else in checking the charges of Oregon's powerful backfield men. It was this task handled by Horween that rendered Bill Steers unfit for the fray during a large portion of the game.

NOT ONLY STAR.

By Arnold Horween was not the only Crimson star. Eddie Casey, whose brilliant handling of forward passes, and shifty broken field running has been a feature in Harvard's play all year, not only served the Crimson in those capacities, but for the first time in his career he exhibited defensive play of the highest quality and cut short many runs that might have led to Oregon scores.

Fred Church, another unheralded player, and one who did not receive his varsity letter this season, played sensationally, and it was his brilliant run of fourteen yards, in which he shook off no less than seven tacklers, that produced Harvard's touchdown.

Harvard's line and ends performed exceptionally, but to none should more credit go than to Wynant Hubbard, a substitute tackle all season and victim of a severely wrenched knee. Despite the fact that the injury made it necessary for his teammates to lift him to his feet after each down, Hubbard played Tubby Clark's old position like a veteran and when Kane found the going a bit too hard, Hubbard shifted to tackle and battered down Oregon's charges.

Late in the game, when Crimson coaches noting the acute pain his injured knee was causing him sent in Faxon.

OREGON'S HEROES.

Nor was Oregon without shinning lights of great brilliancy. Bill Steers, generally regarded as the Lemon-Yellow's greatest backfield man, showed just why he is so regarded, and throughout the first period and the early portion of the second, his strong running with the ball proved him the most difficult problem Harvard gave had encountered upon its hands. He was taken from the game badly hurt, in the second period, but when the final session began he returned his post and played almost as strongly despite his condition.

Scester Manerud, the midget one hundred and twenty-five pound quarterback, who substituted for Steers, proved to be as marvelous a man as the advance notices indicated. Hollis Huntington, the fullback, and "Brandy" Brandenburg, captain and halfback, also featured the game with vicious charges and stubborn defensive play, while Hartlett and Sid Leslie the tackles, and Howard the right end played ranged and alert to total Brandenburg was the real surprise to Harvard for heretofore he has been known only as a defensive player. In today's game, he proved equally effective offensively and contributed many telling gains towards his team's total.

OFF TACKLE PLAYERS.

The Oregon team depended largely on fast plays in rapid succession, interspersed with trick plays the majority of which are directed off tackle. Except for perhaps a dozen direct line smashes, all Oregon plays, headed with excellent interference, were directed at or just outside Harvard's tackles, and in the course of the game Oregon attempted forty-nine plays, all of which were successful, one for a gain of 24 yards and another for a gain of 16 yards.

On these plays, the Oregon player lay or knelt upon the ground, apparently awaiting for his team to line up, and then upon noting that the members of both teams were on side, he hurled the ball laterally to one of the Oregon backs, who started down the field before Harvard realized the ball was in play. It was on one of such plays that the hard tackling of Arnold Horween saved a touchdown and rendered Bill Steers unfit for further play.

Harvard played its customary style of game, allowing its most varied style in the 65-yard drive to its touchdown, and exhibiting a brand of straight line plunging and end running has featured Harvard's play, in its smashing 80-yard march to within six inches of Oregon's goal line.

Sturdy defensive play featured the work of both elevens. Several times, after Oregon had reached much ground in rushing, the Harvard team would rise in its might and crush further attacks, thereby forcing the Oregonians to kick, and twice when Oregon was within ten yards of Harvard's goal. It was this type of play that thwarted seemingly certain touchdowns, and forced the Oregonians to essay field goals. Four times Harvard's play resulted in blocking Oregon's kicks, but only one of these was recovered by the Crimson. Oregon, too, showed defensive work that surprised the Crimson, its most thrilling stand coming in the final play of the game.

On the play before the latter, Arnold Horween, by a twenty-yard smash, carried the ball to Oregon's four-yard line for a first down. His next smash netted two yards, and Oregon halted him on the next attempt to drive for a score, and when Fredrie Church was handed the ball, the Oregon line dove and drove him back two yards. The final play of the game was another Horween smash, and as the summed up energy and power of Horween's 200 pounds was put into such stirring defensive play that when legs and arms were untwined, the ball was found to be just six inches from the goal line.

EARLY FUMBLES COSTLY.

Fumbles were not infrequent in the game, and three such miscues, with Ralph Horween, Church and Arnold Horween as the guilty parties, did much to prevent the Crimson from getting order way in the opening period.

The game throughout was featured by rough, rugged play. Ralph Horween, Harvard's chief lineman, was punishing and drumming reliance, was the first to be rendered unfit for battle. Twelve minutes later Bill Steers, the star of Oregon, was carried from the field.

Keith Kane, Wynant Hubbard and Morris Pinney of Harvard and Jacobberger and Hollingbery of Oregon also left the field as the result of injuries before the contest ended and of the number. Bill Steers was the only one to re-enter the game.

The fragrance of the millions of roses and carnations that decked the floats in the tournament of roses floral parade still pervaded the air of Tournament Park when the two elevens trotted upon the field. Wild unorganized cheering from all sides of the packed arena greeted the teams and from then on there was a constant hubbub of noise and gesture.

BOOES AND HISSES, TOO.

Booing and hissing, such as is usually confined to baseball parks, sometimes interspersed the furore, while the bare of no less than four bands stationed at different corners of the stands, and rivalling one another in lung power as well as in the selection of selections, made a strange impression upon those accustomed to the more orderly football gatherings of the East.

Harvard secured the first break when Captain Billy Murray called the toss of the coin and chose the south goal. Oregon elected to kick, and Steers drove the kickoff to Ralph Horween who ran the ball back eight yards to Harvard's 36-yard line. On the first play Ralph Horween fumbled and Howard, Oregon's right end, recovered on Harvard's 40-yard line. Oregon's first play was stopped without a gain, but on the second Jacobberger slashed off left tackle for eighteen years to Harvard's 22-yard mark. Holding on the part of Oregon gave the latter a 15-yard penalty, however, and after three attempts at plunging with little gain, Steers tried a field goal which went wide, registering a touchback and giving Harvard the ball on its own 25-yard line.

After a five-yard gain by Casey, Ralph Horween punted to Jacobberger on Oregon's 40-yard line and Desmond tackled him in his tracks. Three short gains by Oregon again made it necessary for the latter to punt, the ball again going to the touchback and being awarded to Harvard on the Crimson's 20-yard line in the first play Casey raced around left end for seventeen yards, and Arnold Horween followed suit five through right guard. The latter fumbled on the next play, Huntington of Oregon recovering the ball on Oregon's 45-yard line. Smashes by Steers and Huntington netted on first down, and then Huntington fumbled. A Horween pointed to Jacobberger on Oregon's 40-yard line, and the latter fumbled, Captain Murray recovering for Harvard. Two short gains and an incompleted forward pass was followed by a Harvard punt which Williams batted and B. Lewis recovered at midfield.

ON HARVARD'S 6-YARD LINE.

Oregon inaugurated its best display of offense and, with Jacobberger, Huntington and Steers, figuring in off tackle and direct line plays and a forward pass sieved to Howard, Hollingbery carried the ball to Harvard's 6-yard line just as the period ended.

The second period opened with a determined stand on the part of the Crimson team, and failing to gain, Steers dropped back to his twenty-eight-yard line and booted a field goal, placing Oregon in the lead. Harvard's kickoff was followed by Oregon's first attempt at trick plays This gained but three yards before Arnold Horween smeared Steers, who arrived the ball, and Oregon was forced to kick. Captain Murray ashored in the play on his own thirty-three yard line and on to his forty-yard stripe before he was spilled Then he opened Harvard's scoring attack. A seven yard dash off tackle by Casey was followed by a forward pass Murray to Casey which with the latter's broken field work produced a twenty-two yard gain to Oregon's thirty-five-yard line. Arnold Horween then hit the center for four yards, and another forward pass, Church to Casey, was speared by the latter and carried fourteen yards to Oregon's eighteen-yard line. Oregon was offside on the next play and Harvard drove in first down five yards nearer the Lemon Yellow goal. After a two-yard gain by Casey, Freddie Church was handed the ball, and racing off right tackle, shimmied his way through the entire Oregon team for a touchdown, which was followed by Arnold Horween's goal from touchdown.

MANERUD KICKS GOAL.

A kicking duel interrupted by Steers' 24-yard gain on a freak play and Harvard's blocking of an Oregon kick, only to see Oregon recover the ball, continued until late in the period when a 15-yard penalty and a 15-yard smash through centre by Huntington placed Oregon again in position to attempt a field goal which Scester Manerud scored from Harvard's 32-yard line. The period ended shortly after the following kickoff, with the ball in Oregon's possession on its own 45-yard line.

The third period proved largely a matter of receiving or sending kicks until it had been but half completed. At that point Manerud's punt traveled but 35 yards into the arms of Captain Murray, who ran the ball back 10 yards to Oregon's 30-yard line Here Felton was introduced into the game and promptly hurled a forward pass to Eddie Casey which produced a 15-yard gain to Oregon's 15-yard line, but Church fumbled on the next rush Howard again recovering the ball for Oregon. Late in the period Oregon again got its offence under way in excellent shape and, with Huntington and Manerud featuring, carried the ball from Oregon's 20-yard line to Harvard's 32-yard line, where Manerud's try for a field goal failed miserably, and Harvard, getting the ball on its 20-yard line punted out of danger

STEERS' PUNT GOES 60 YARDS.

The final period opened with a 60-yard punt by Steers, which carried into the end bleachers for a touchback. Felton's punt from Harvard's 20-yard line carried to Oregon's 40-yard mark, where a 15-yard smash by Brandenburg, a 15-yard penalty to Harvard for Indianising and a seven-yard gain by Steers carried the pigskin to Harvard's 34-yard line, where Steers tried a field goal but went wide of its mark, for a touchback Felton's punt from the Crimson 20-yard line was partially blocked, the ball carrying only eighteen yards and being run back nine to Harvard 42-yard line by Huntington, assisted by Steers and Huntington carried to Harvard's 14-yard line, where Sedgwick raced through and blocked Manerud's attempted drop kick, but Huntington recovered the ball on Harvard's 17-yard mark and after three short gains by Manerud and Steers, the former again tried for an aerial score and again failed

Getting the ball once more on its twenty-yard line, Harvard launched its most telling attack. Arnold Horween, on six successive rushes, gained twenty-eight yards to Harvard's forty-eight-yard line. Casey made three and A. Horween three more, and then a forward pass Felton to Casey, carried the latter to Oregon's thirty-two-yard li Arnold the powerful and seemingly tir was A Horween was rolled upon and produced a five-yard gain, and then rode right through the Oregon team for twenty-four yards to Oregon's four-yard line.

OREGON LINE HOLDS.

It was at this point that the husky Oregonmen showed their resisting power as never before in the game Less than a minute remained to be played and but four yards to gain in four rushes. Yet the Lemon-Yellow line he d and the staunchest work of the Crimson crew got the ball no nearer than six inches of the goal line, when time was called.

The statistics of the game show Harvard to have made 11 first downs to Oregon's 17; to have gained 179 yards in rushing to Oregon's 371; to have completed four out of six forward passes for a gain of 50 yards to Oregon's completion of one forward pass out of three attempted for a gain of 10 yards; to have fumbled four times to Oregon's three, and to have recovered three times to Oregon's four; to have blocked two kicks to Oregon's one; to have run back kicks 60 yards to Oregon's 03 yards, and to have been penalized three times for a total of 35 yards to Oregon's being penalized five times for a total of 42 yards.

EVERETT AND SCOTT HIGH PLAY 7-7 TIE

Everett, Wash., Jan. 2.—Scott High of Toledo, O., and Everett High battled to a 7 to 7 tie in an interscholastic high school football game. Everett scored in the first period and Scott in the second. Just before the game closed Quarterback Scheerer of Scott was downed on Everett's eight-inch line after making a forty-yard run. Everett held Scott on the ball on downs and about two feet from the goal line.

"Murray Proud of Being Leader of the Crimson"

By CAPTAIN MURRAY, HARVARD.

Of course I am very happy tonight. Too happy to say very much. I'm proud to have been captain of such a great Harvard team and I'm glad we were able to vindicate Eastern football, for despite the viciousness of the score there was no question which was the superior team. Oregon played a great game. We knew we were up against a tough proposition, but we were confident, not overconfident, of victory.

"We Did Our Best," Says Oregon Field Leader

By CAPTAIN BRANDENBURG.

We tried ourbestan d we believe our defeat is not without honor. We were facing a big advantage in weight and the loss of Steers coming so early in the game handicapped our chances. Had he been right when he returned, I have not a doubt we would have scored one or two of the field goals we missed, and with such scores victory would have been ours. I congratulate Harvard on having a team of real spirit and ability.

"Harvard Came West to Win, and Won."—Fisher

By COACH FISHER, HARVARD

We won and that is enough. We came West to do just that one thing—to win. The score may have been small, 7 to 6, but the Crimson crew certainly put that seven points up in typical Harvard. The little old forward pass route and then the kick for the goal from touchdown, I mention and substitute should share equally in the glory. The victory was the work of the team as a whole. The entire East was rich and no, whether they were of Harvard sympathi s or otherwise and I am glad the Harvard team has been able to make them so happy as the reformers I am now receiving would indicate.

Oregon Coach Thinks His Team the Best

By COACH HUNTINGTON, OREGON.

Well, we lost the game to Harvard and even now after it's all over I maintain that we didn't lose to a better team. The Oregon players were never in better condition and, from my point of view, outplayed the much heavier Harvard eleven throughout the game. Had you since the first week of my back field? We lost all right, but by a score of 7 to 6, and that really makes it kind of hard. It would be all right if Harvard had put over several touchdowns and really showed that it was a better team, but one touchdown to two field goals, or, in other words, 7 to 6. Pretty tough; pretty tough.

Newton Alumni Beat High School Seven by Close Margin

Playing a fine defensive game, the Newton high school hockey team forced the alumni seven to the limit to win, 2 to 1, in the game on Bullough's pond.

Learnard's playing at goal was sensational. The puck was constantly in front of the Newton net and the little goal tender contributed no less than twenty-five stops as his offering to the team's defence.

Kenney Breaks Wrist

Toronto, Jan. 2.—Wild Burt Kenney broke his wrist in the eighth round of his bout with Battling Levinsky and was obliged to quit, the verdict going to the latter.

BOUT HERE DEMPSEY'S CHOICE

Manager Kearns Says Champion Confident American Promoters Will Stage Battle

By H. M. WALKER.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 2.—Cabled offers are piling up so high in front of Jack Dempsey's front porch that the world's heavyweight champion will soon have to start a bonfire or tunnel his way out.

Manager Jack Kearns cleared the atmosphere considerably today when he gave the Universal Service a straight from the shoulder statement.

"We have three European offers of $250,000 each for Dempsey to box Carpentier over there. This sounds like a whale of a lot of money, but to be perfectly honest we are scarcely interested in the cables outside of the fact that they represent Class A publicity, and as we are in the motion picture business now we can use all of the printed stuff thrown our way.

"I would much rather fight Carpentier in America. We won the title over here and the challenger should come to us. I am confident that we have promoters in the United States who can handle this show as well or better than it can be handled in Europe.

"One big showman, Dominick Torrioh, of New Orleans, is sending his personal representative here next week to talk things over with me.

"Dempsey, as world's heavy-weight champion, is more or less public property. For that reason I feel that we should put our plans out in the open where all may see.

"Our motion picture work will be completed early this coming Spring if nothing definite regarding a Carpentier match has been settled by that time, I mean to start a Summer fight campaign in this country.

"By this I mean that Dempsey will take on all comers. We can make as much money in three or four easy fights here as we could going over to a strange country and taking a chance."

JACKIE CLARKE WINS FROM GEORGE ROBINSON

New Bedford, Jan. 2.—Jackie Clarke of Fall River won over George Robinson of Cambridge here in a 12-round bout. Robinson did considerable of the leading, but Clarke's blows were the more effective.

Carney Stops Coyne

Billy Carney of New Bedford stopped Frank Coyne of New Jersey in eight rounds, the main affair of the Coliseum A. C. show at Quincy. A left hook fractured Coyne's jaw. Carney was the aggressor and had the better of the milling most of the way. Phil Christie and Dutch Keegan boxed a draw.

REDDY LOSES ON FOUL IN 3D ROUND

Battling Reddy disappointed a big crowd at the Commonwealth A. C.'s New Year's show by fouling Harry Lewis in the third round. Had it not been for Referee Conley called the scrap off Reddy had been warned about butting low several times, but apparently wanted to finish and didn't care about the decision.

It's a sort of a habit with that youth, and, justice to the fans, the promoters should tie him down to conditions before putting him on hereabouts. Reddy has severed relations with his manager, and under new guidance expects to get a bout with Jimmy Kilbane.

The fact while it lasted was pepper enough with Reddy has up the ante. He lasted three rounds and had a chance in both to would have won if he battled as he can. Brown did a lot of scoring with his left to the face but not nearly enough to offset Reddy's body bombardment.

Lewis fought through the final round was lifted by a foul. Boo McFarland punished a few ones on Young Sol Lon. This blow was accidental, but it cut a gash shaped like a good-sized Delly Major and Johnny Martin sent six rounds to a draw and Tommy Nee beat Young Wolgast in four rounds.

KETONEN DEFENDS TITLE SUCCESSFULLY

Waino Ketonen, world's middleweight champion wrestler, successfully defended his title against John Kalonis, the Greek champion, winning the bout with a toe hold in two hours nine minutes and forty seconds at the Grand Opera House.

Cyclone Burns celebrated his comeback to the game after a year's home by dismissing of Alex Jarvis of Lodeman with a flying mare and body hold in fifteen minutes and seven seconds.

PIERCE BREAKS WRIST! BLOOM GETS VERDICT

Lowell, Jan. 2—Harry Pierce of Syracuse broke his left wrist in the third round of his bout with Phil Bloom of Brooklyn at the Crescent A. C. the latter receiving the decision on.

Girard Gould of Lawrence and Frank Hayden of Boston boxed an eight-round draw.

Intensely Interesting Mystery Film Serial

THE CINEMA MURDER

Poverty and Love With New York Background

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

One of the most interesting and popular writers of the up-to-date style of fiction treating of love and intrigue.

"The Cinema Murder" in motion pictures, with Miss Marion Davies as the charming heroine, a Cosmopolitan production, will soon be shown at all leading theatres. Screened under direction of George D. Baker. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft Picture.

How the Story Starts

Philip Romilly, a poor London art teacher, calls on the girl he is engaged to at his old home, Detton Magna, and she tells him she is tired of waiting for him to get enough money to marry on and has promised to wed his brother Douglas. He notes that her house is better furnished than when he saw it last. She taunts him with his poverty and he leaves the house, walking towards a canal nearby. He goes to a Liverpool hotel and represents himself as Douglas Romilly. He takes passage for America.

ALREADY there was a faint touch of sea in the river breeze, and he was impatient for the immeasurable open spaces, the salt wind, the rise and fall of the great ship. Then, as he stood on the threshold of his cabin, he heard voices.

Failed to See Him

"Down in number 116, eh?"

"Yes, sir," he heard his steward's voice reply. "Mr. Romilly has just gone down. You've only a minute, sir, before the last call for passengers."

"That's all right," the voice which had spoken to him over the telephone that morning replied. "Just like to shake hands with him and wish him bon voyage."

Philip's teeth came together in a little fury of anger. It was maddening, this, to be trapped when only a few minutes remained between him and safety! His brain worked swiftly. He took his chance of finding the next stateroom empty, as it happened to be, and stepped quickly inside. He kept his back to the door until the footsteps had passed. He heard the knock at his stateroom, stepped back into the corridor and passed along a little gangway to the other side of the ship. He hurried up the stairs and into the smoking room. The bugle was sounding now, and hoarse voices were shouting:

"Everyone for the shore! Last call for the shore! Last call for the shore!"

"Give me a brandy and soda," he begged the steward, who was just opening the bar.

The man glanced at the clock and obeyed. Philip swallowed half of it at a gulp, then sat down with the tumbler in his hand. All of a sudden something disappeared from in front of one of the portholes. His heart gave a little jump. They were moving! He sprang up and hurried to the doorway. Slowly but unmistakably they were gliding away from the dock. Already a lengthening line of people were waving their handkerchiefs and shouting farewells. Around them in the river little tugs were steaming, and the ropes from the dock had been thrown loose. Philip stepped to the rail, his heart growing lighter at every moment. His ubiquitous steward, laden with hand luggage, paused for a moment.

"I sent a gentleman down to your stateroom just before the steamer started, sir," he announced, "gentleman of the name of Gayes, who wanted to say good-by to you."

"Bad luck!" Philip answered. "I must have just missed him."

The steward turned around and pointed to the quay.

After her inspired dramatic performance, Elizabeth Dalstan (Marion Davies), the promising young motion picture actress, receives the congratulations of the studio manager.

"There he is, sir—elderly gentleman in a grey suit and a bunch of violets in his buttonhole. He's looking straight at you."

Philip raised his cap and waved it with enthusiasm. After a moment's hesitation the other man did the same. The steward collected his belongings and shuffled on.

"He picked you out, sir, all right," he remarked as he disappeared in the companionway.

Philip turned away with a little final wave of the hand.

"Glad I didn't miss him altogether," he observed cheerfully. "Good afternoon, Mr. Gayes! Good-by, England!"

Chapter IV

MR. RAYMOND GREENE, very soon after the bugle had sounded for dinner that evening, took his place at the head of one of the small tables in the saloon and waved everyone good evening. It was perfectly apparent that he meant to enjoy the trip, that he was prepared to be kind to fellow passengers and that he wished them to know it. Even the somewhat melancholy-looking steward who had been waiting for his arrival cheered up at the sight of his beaming face, and the other four occupants of the table returned his salutation according to their lights.

"Two vacant places, I am sorry to see," Mr. Greene observed. "One of them I can answer for, though. The young lady who is to sit on my right will be down directly—Miss Elizabeth Dalstan, the great actress, you know. She is by way of being under my charge. Very charming and talented young lady she is. Let us see who our other absentee is."

He stretched across and glanced at the name upon the card.

"Mr. Douglas Romilly," he read out. "Quite a good name—English, without a doubt. I have crossed with you before, haven't I, sir?" he went on affably, turning to his nearest neighbor on the left.

A burly, many-chinned American signified his assent.

"Why I should say so," he admitted. "Don't I? Was a dollar bill, Mr. Green, for every film I've seen of yours in the United States."

Mr. Greene beamed with satisfaction.

"Well, I am glad to hear you've come across my stuff," he declared. "I've made some films for myself on the films and I am proud of it. Raymond Green it is, at your service."

"Joseph P. Hyam's mine," the American announced, watching the disappearance of his soup plate with an air of regret. "I'm in the clothing business. If my wife were here, she'd say you wouldn't think it to look at me. Never was faddy about myself, though," he added, with a glance at Mr. Greene's very correct dinner attire.

"You ought to remember me, Mr. Greene," one of the two men remarked from the right-hand side of the table. "I've played golf with you at Baltusrol more than once."

Mr. Greene gazed surreptitiously at the card and smiled.

"Why, it's James P. Busby, of course! You remember Your father's the Busby Iron Works, isn't he?"

The young man nodded.

Introductions

And this is Mr. Caroll, one of our engineers," he said, indicating a rather rough-looking personage by his side.

"Delighted to meet you both." Mr. Greene assured them. 'Say, I remember your golf, Mr. Busby! You're some driver, eh? And those long putts of yours—you never took three on any green that I can remember!"

"Been playing in England" the young man asked.

Mr Raymond Greene shook his head.

"When I am on business," he explained, "I don't carry my sticks about with me, and I tell you this last fortnight has been a giddy whirl for me. I was in Berlin Wednesday night, and I did business in Vienna last Monday. Ah! here comes Miss Dalstan!"

He rose ceremoniously to his feet. A young lady who was still wearing her travelling clothes smiled at him delightfully and sank into the chair by his side. During the little attentions caused by her arrival, no one paid any attention to the man who had slipped into the other vacant place opposite Mr. Greene, however, when he had finished making known his companion's wants to the steward, welcomed Philip Romilly genially.

"Now we're a full table," he declared. "That's what I like. I only hope we'll keep it up all the voyage. Mind, there'll be a forfeit for the first one that misses a meal. Mr. Romilly, isn't it?" he went on, glancing at his left-hand neighbor's card once more. "My name's Raymond Greene. I am an old traveler and there's nothing I enjoy more, outside my business, than these little ocean trips, especially when they come after a pretty strenuous time on shore. Crossed many times, sir?"

"Never before," Philip answered. "First trip, eh?" Mr. Greene remarked, mildly interested. "Well, well, you've some surprises in store for you, then. Let me make you acquainted with your opposite neighbor, Miss Elizabeth Dalstan I dare say, even if you haven't been in the States, you know some of our principal actresses by name."

Meets Actress

Philip raised his head and caught a glimpse of a rather pale face, a mass of deep brown hair, a pleasant smile and a very shapely mouth, and the rather intense regard of a pair of wonderfully soft eyes, whose color at that moment he was not able to determine.

"I have had the pleasure of seeing Miss Dalstan on the stage," he observed.

"Capital!" Mr. Raymond Greene exclaimed. "We haven't met before, have we, Mr. Romilly? Something kind of familiar in your face. You are not by way of being in the Profession, are you?"

Romilly shook his head.

"I am a manufacturer," he acknowledged

"That so?" his neighbor remarked, a trifle surprised. "Queer! I had a fancy we'd met, and quite lately, too. I am in the cinema business. You may have heard of me—Raymond Greene."

"I have seen some of your films," Philip told him. "Very excellent productions, if you will allow me to say so."

"That's pleasant hearing at any time," Mr. Greene admitted, with a gratified smile. "Well, I can see that we are going to be quite a friendly party. That's Mr. Busby on your right, Mr. Romilly—some golfer, I can tell you!—and his friend Mr. Caroll alongside. The lady next you—"

"My name is Miss Pinsent," the elderly lady indicated declared pleasantly, replying to Mr. Greene's interrogative glance. "It is my first trip to America, too. I am going out to see a nephew who has settled in Chicago."

"Capital!" Mr. Raymond Greene repeated. "Now we are all more or less a family party. What did you say your line of business was, Mr. Romilly?"

"I don't remember mentioning it," Philip observed, "but I am a manufacturer of boots and shoes."

Elizabeth Dalstan looked across at him a little curiously. One might have surmised that she was in some way disappointed.

"Coming over to learn a thing or two from us, eh?" Mr. Greene went on. "You use all our machinery, don't you? Well, there's Paul Lawton on board, from Brockton. I should think he has one of the biggest plants in Massachusetts. I must make you acquainted with him."

Philip frowned slightly.

"That is very kind of you, Mr. Greene," he acknowledged, "but do you know I would very much rather not talk business with any one while I am on the steamer? I am a little overworked and I need the rest."

Renewed Interest

Elizabeth Dalstan looked at her vis-a-vis with some renewal of her former interest. She saw a young man who was, without doubt, good-looking, although he certainly had an over-tired and somewhat depressed appearance. His cheeks were colorless, and there were little dark lines under his eyes as though he suffered from sleeplessness. He was clean-shaven and he had the sensitive mouth of an artist. His forehead was fine and intellectually good. His air of breeding was unmistakable.

"You do look a little fagged," Mr. Raymond Greene observed sympathetically. "Well, these are strenuous days in business. We all have to stretch every nerve for we can go, and keep stretching out, or else some one else will get ahead of us. Business been good with you this Fall, Mr. Romilly?"

Eases Colds

At once! Relief with "Pape's Cold Compound"

The first dose eases your cold! Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken usually breaks up a severe cold and ends all grippe misery.

Relief awaits you! Open your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of your head; stop your nose running; relieve your headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Insist on Pape's! —Advertisement.

Peel Off The Old Skin; Bring Out the New

You know that beneath that muddy, overfed or blotchy complexion you have a skin that's clear, soft and white. If you could only have this mere beautiful skin exposed to view instead of the horrid old skin you now behold in your mirror! You can—and in a very simple, harmless process, that you can use yourself. Get an ounce of common mer-o-lized wax at your druggist's and this evening spread a little coating all over your face. Tomorrow morning wash it off with warm water. Small powder-like particles of the lifeless top skin will come off with the wax. Repeat the daily until all the worn-out, sallow, aged skin has been removed. Then you'll have a lovelier, healthier looking complexion than you ever believed possible. Blackheads, pimples, freckles or other surface disfigurements are of course removed with the skin itself.—Advertisement.

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

"BY holding intact the spot where rail and water are bound to meet," he told me, "I insure the terminal on tidewater which the railroad must have before consenting to build. But if I sell it to Tom, Dick and Harry, they will be certain to gouge the railroad when the latter tries to buy it from them. They may scare the railroad away."

"Naturally!" Bryce replied. "The average human being is a hog, and merciless when he has the upper hand. I figures that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. My father, on the contrary, has always planned for the future. He didn't want the railroad blocked by landspeculators and its building delayed. The country needed rail connection with the outside world, and moreover his San Hedrin timber isn't worth a hoot until that feeder to a transcontinental road shall be built to tap it."

"But he sold Bill Henderson the mill-site on tide-water that he refused to sell me, and later I had to pay Henderson's heirs a whooping price for it. And I haven't half the land I need."

"But he needed Henderson then. They had a deal on together. You must remember, Colonel, that while Bill Henderson held that Squaw Creek timber he later sold you, my father would never sell him a millsite. Can't you see the sporting point of view involved" My father and Bill Henderson were good-natured rivals for thirty years they had tried to out-game each other on that Squaw Creek timber. Henderson thought he could force my father to buy at a certain price, and my father thought he could force Henderson to sell at a lesser price; they were perfectly frank about it with each other and held no grudges. Of course, after you bought Henderson out, you foolishly took over his job of trying to out-game my father. That's why you bought Henderson out, isn't it? You had a vision of my father's paying you a nice profit on your investment, but he fooled you, and now you're peeved and won't play."

Bryce hitched his chair farther toward the Colonel. "Why shouldn't my dad be nice to Bill Henderson after the feud ended?" he continued. "They could play the game together then, and they did. Colonel, why can't you be as sporty as Henderson and my father? They fought each other, but they fought fairly and in the open, and they never lost the respect and liking each had for the other."

"I will not renew your logging contract. That is final, young man. No man can ride me with spurs and get away with it."

"Oh, I knew that yesterday"

"Then why have you called on me today taking up my time on a dead issue?"

"I wanted to give you one final chance to reopen the Logging question. You have it in your power to smash the Cardigan Redwood Lumber Company. Acquire it at 60 per cent. of its value, and merge its assets with your Laguna Grande Lumber Company. You are an ambitious man. You want to be the greatest redwood manufacturer in California, and in order to achieve your ambition you are willing to ruin a competitor; you decline to play the game like a thoroughbred."

"I play the game of business according to the rules of the game; I do nothing illegal, sir"

"And nothing generous or chivalrous, Colonel, you know your plea of a shortage of timber-stock is that the contract for hauling our logs has been very profitable and will be more profitable in the future if you will accept a fifty-cent-per-thousand increase on the freight-rate and renew the contract for ten years."

"Nothing doing, young man. Remember, you are not in a position to ask favors"

"Then I suppose we'll have to go down fighting?"

"I do not anticipate much of a fight."

"You'll get as much as I can give you."

"I'm not at all apprehensive."

"And I'll begin by running your woods-hogs out of the country.'

"Ah-h-h"

"You know why, of course—those burl panels in your dining room. Rondeau felled a tree in our Valley of the Giants to get that burl for you, Colonel Pennington."

Pennington flushed. "I defy you to prove that," he almost shouted.

"Very well. I'll make Rondeau confess; perhaps he'll even tell me who sent him after the burl. Upon my word, I think you inspired that dastardly raid. At any rate, I know Rondeau is guilty, and you, as his employer and the beneficiary of his crime, must accept the odium."

The Colonel's face was white. "I do not admit anything except that you appear to have lost your head, young man. However, for the sake of argument: Grant that Rondeau felled the tree, he did it under the apprehension that your Valley of the Giants is a part of my Squaw Creek timber adjoining."

"I do not believe that. There was malice in the act—brutality even, for my mother's grave identified the land as ours, and Rondeau felled the tree on her tombstone"

"If that is so, and Rondeau felled that tree—I am sincerely sorry, Cardigan. Name your price and I will pay you for the tree. I do not desire any troubles to develop over this affair."

Very Precise

A parvenu who had purchased a country estate was entertaining a house-party, which included a famous geologist. Pointing to an enormous rock in the distance, he said, "That is seventy thousand and three years old." "You are very precise," the geologist said. "Oh, I know I am right!" his host replied "A geologist was here just three years ago, and he said then it was seventy thousand years old!"

Mrs. Solomon Says---

NOW, my Daughter, in the Land of Nod there dwelt two swains.

And the first of these was known among women as "Dub"; but the second was called "Woman-Charmer." And wheresoever he went, the damsels followed after him, singing his praises and crowning him with garlands.

And, it came to pass, that Dub in his wretchedness besought wisdom from Woman-Charmer, saying:

"Tell me, oh thou lucky one, how DOST thou hypnotize them?

But Woman Charmer smiled upon him pityingly, and answered him, saying:

"How long, oh thou Simple Soul, wilt thou hearken unto false prophets?

"How long wilt thou fondly believe that a woman MUST be dazzled, and that damsels are won with 'stunts' and poses?

"For what damsel OVER seventeen hath ever fallen from his 'Impressionist'?

"Go to! I charge thee, if thou wouldst be a winner among women, cast aside thy vanity, and thine egotism, and thine amateur dramatics! Let not thine heart be troubled concerning the parting of thine hair, nor the set of thy cravats, nor the brilliancy of thy wit.

"For I shall give thee three rules, which if thou followest them shall make thee ruler over the heart of any woman.

"First, LOOK at her.

"Second, LISTEN to her.

"Third, STAY by her.

"And while he is talking unto one woman, his limps mention not the name of any other woman.

"For she whom he seeketh to please, is IT!

"Verily, verily, my Son, in the comedy of love no woman yearneth to play audience, nor chorus, nor back drop for a dazzler

"But the modest man shineth in a dim corner; and he that knoweth how to star HER, shall be leading man in her heart forever!"

No Wonder

The old man was applying at the eye hospital for some spectacles, and the doctor was making a test of his eyes.

A card was fixed on the wall a little distance away from where the old man was sitting, and the doctor asked him

"Can you read that, my man?"

"No, sir," said the old man, "I can't"

The doctor told him to go nearer.

"Well, can you read it now?"

"No, sir" said the old man sadly, shaking his head "You see, sir, I never learnt to read."

Childhood's Regret

The Two Voices

CHAPTER XI.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

RUTH COURTNEY had had a long and frank talk with her mother that afternoon on her return to her own home.

Mrs. Courtney informed her younger daughter that Doris was out.

"It seems a little strange to me," Mrs. Courtney commented, "that Laura should not have sought out poor Doris at this time. Their anxiety is the same, I should think. Laura has been anxious about her brother; Doris about her betrothed. Had Laura been a different kind of girl, her heart must have gone to her brother's fiancee."

Ruth was at a loss to explain her friend's attitude. It would never do to suggest that Laura cared more for the younger sister than for the older. That would be unforgiveable.

"Well, you see," she ventured, "Laura and I have always been rather more intimate than Doris and Laura are. Besides"—with a sudden inspiration—"Laura did not feel that she had a right to make any demands on Doris just now. On the very afternoon that she got the news of her brother's accident, she reminded me that I must go home at once to Doris. But I told her that I would not be needed while you were here."

These words had the effect of slightly mollifying the parent's judgment.

"I am glad you appreciated how great was Doris' dependence upon me," she said. "Yet it should not have been necessary, Ruth, for you to be reminded of your sister's need of your sympathy at that crisis"

"I did not need to be reminded of it, mother." The girl strove to speak patiently. "I arranged to be back here by the time that Doris returned from the matinee—with Ralph Norton."

Something in her manner of uttering the name of Doris' admirer impressed the mother."

"You do not like him, Ruth. Why?"

"I have not said that I do not like him," the girl replied, "Doris likes him—and he is her friend, not mine."

Then, to avoid the discussion of a disagreeable subject, she changed the current of her mother's thoughts by remarking:

"Laura has just received a long letter from her father, telling her a good deal about Hugh's condition"

"Oh, has she?" Mr. Courtney was immediately interested. "And, of course, she read it to you. Well, since she did not think fit to send it over to Doris to read, perhaps you will tell me what Mr. Rodney says."

Without further preamble she repeated as nearly as possible what Mr. Rodney had written.

"Oh, poor boy!" Mrs. Courtney commented when the recital was ended. "And he has such lovely eyes! But his father seems to think they are going to be all right eventually, doesn't he?"

"Yes." Ruth said quickly. "He said the discomfort was only temporary."

At her mother's words a strange fear had seized her. Suppose Hugh's sight should be affected! But no—nothing as awful as that was to be apprehended. His father had never even intimated it.

The Sea-Wolf

Of all the inhabitants of the ocean few are more destructive than the sea-wolf, a kind of dolphin which attains, when full grown, a length of fourteen feet, and a weight of three thousand pounds. When a mother walrus perceives a sea-wolf it endeavors to throw its cub on an iceberg, if one is near. Failing this, it gets the cub on top of its head and swims with it above water. But this is a vain. Diving far below, the fish of prey comes up with tremendous force, striking the female mother a terrific blow and jolting the cub off its head into the water. Here it falls an easy victim to the assailant and is soon devoured.

OHIO BODY IS ACTIVE AND HIGHER

Traded In on Boston Stock Exchange for First Time

Stocks were higher on the Boston Stock Exchange when 1920 trading began, but gains were moderate as a rule. Mayflower and Davis-Daly were the two most active coppers. Trading began today on this exchange in Ohio Body and Blower Co. stock. The listing consists of temporary certificates for 100,000 shares without par value. The temporary certificates are transferable in Boston, New York and Cleveland. This stock opened at 25¾. It closed on the Boston Curb on Wednesday at 25¼. Before noon it had advanced to 26¼, a net active issue.

Stocks to show a point or more gain during the forenoon included St. Mary's Land, Parish & Bingham, Stewart, Osceola, Allouez, Isle Royale and Island Creek, while fractional advances were recorded for Copper Range, East Butte, Old Dominion, Boston & Albany, New Haven and Eastern Manufacturing.

Among issues to recede were Pacific Mills, Edison, Carson Hill, Boston & Albany, Simms Magneto, International Products, Davis-Daly, North Butte and Waldorf. The two first named were the only ones to show a point loss at their lowest.

Issues to sell ex-dividend were Amoskeag common and preferred, International Products, Davis-Daly, Punta Alegre, U. S. Smelting common and preferred and Westinghouse Electric common and preferred.

At the end of the morning the market was still strong but prices were below their highest for the period.

DOLS FEATURE THE CURB.

The Curb market had a fairly active start and prices were higher in the instance of most leaders. Oil issues were the early feature. Among stocks to advance on opening transactions were Arizona Silver, Chief, First National, Silver Reef, Texada and White Oil. Among those to decline were: Black Hawk, Boston & Montana, Homa and Longford.

Gains at the end of an hour included Simms Petroleum, 5; Smith Lunt, ½, and White Oil, ⅝. Mutual Divide was unchanged. Among declines were Pilgrim, 4 cents, and Hecla Divide, 2 cents.

RECORD CLEARINGS IN 1919 BY BOSTON BANKS

The expansion of trade in this city and vicinity is shown by Boston bank clearings for 1919, they exceeding in total those of any other year by a large amount. Totaling $17,902,682,762, they aggregated $1,263,473,752 more than clearings for 1918 and were $10,385,587,682 greater than for 1914, the year to which war began the part of operations who believe that if speculation is given a free rein there will be a strong forward movement.

The market will no longer feel the effect of selling to establish losses for use to evade taxation. It is said to be heavily oversold. Some disappointment was expressed because Steels did not respond better to Judge Gary's statement that prices for steel products are to be advanced. It was offset in a measure by the circumstance that the labor situation is limiting production and that larger profits by manufacturers are not probable even with higher rates in force. How far prices for securities will rise in January will depend mainly on money developments.

The following table shows clearings for each month last year in comparison with 1918 (000 omitted):

	1919	1918
January	$1,472,655	$1,150,000
February	1,259,847	1,000,000

AM. WOOLEN IS A WEAK N. Y. ISSUE

Trading Held in Check by 15 Per Cent. Call Money Rate

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but prices were below their morning highest in the case of the majority. Call money renewed at 15 per cent. and the high rate was a restraint upon the market. Trading was of moderate volume, only four transactions totaling less than 280,000 shares. American Woolen common was a weak issue, being off three points at its lowest. Strongest stocks at the forenoon's finish included American International Corporation, Hide and Leather, International Paper, Middle States Oil, Pierce Arrow, Ohio Cities Gas, Stutz and Industrial Alcohol. They were up from one to more than two points. In the foreign exchange market demand sterling opened at 3.78, francs at 10.50 and lire at 13.22, all higher.

OPENS NEW YEAR STRONG.

The market began the new year strong, prices advancing all through the list, and initial gains ranging from fractions to four points. Within a few minutes the movement halted and the trend became variable. Strongest issues during the first hour were Mexican Petroleum, American Can, Studebaker, Baldwin, Chino, Gulf Steel, Norther Pacific and U. S. Rubber. Mexican Petroleum advanced the most, American Woolen opened at 146½, a three-point gain, but profit taking wiped it all out and sent it more than a point below its initial figure. Republic Steel started a point higher, but soon showed more than a point loss. It was one of the most active issues. Steels were not especially active as a class in early trading and failed to show much change thereafter. This applied to coals. Studebaker was the most active as well as the strongest motor. Coppers ruled higher and were quiet. Rails were dull but on a little higher level. American Tobacco securities led tobacco. Rise in sterling was stronger in spots than in groups.

SENTIMENT WAS BELLISH.

Trading sentiment was bullish at the start and there was some demand for stock from the outside. Expectation that call money would remain high tended to check enthusiasm on the part of operators who believe that if speculation is given a free rein there will be a strong forward movement.

The market will no longer feel the effect of selling to establish losses for use to evade taxation. It is said to be heavily oversold. Some disappointment was expressed because Steels did not respond better to Judge Gary's statement that prices for steel products are to be advanced. It was offset in a measure by the circumstance that the labor situation is limiting production and that larger profits by manufacturers are not probable even with higher rates in force. How far prices for securities will rise in January will depend mainly on money developments.

WORLD SUGAR SHORAGE OF TWO MILLION TONS

People who expect any reduction in the price of sugar this year will get little encouragement from trade statistics. The world crop will be more than 2,000,000 tons less than was produced in the year preceding the war. The world crop in the last pre-war year was 18,667,000 tons, while for this year it is estimated at 16,400,000 tons by such trade authorities as Willet and Gray.

While more cane sugar will be produced, especially in Cuba, the decrease in the beet sugar output cannot be made up until conditions become normal in Europe. It is figured that this year's whole crop will be but 279,348 tons larger than last year's crop, although Cuban production may increase nearly 450,000 tons.

Will Rogers' Wit to Be Cartooned for Newspapers

Will Rogers, Goldwyn movie star, whose bright humor is being made into cartoons.

Will Rogers, one of the Goldwyn screen stars, has just completed arrangements whereby his witty epigrams will be embodied in a cartoon syndicate. The cartoons will be drawn by Ralph Barton.

Besides being a rope thrower of national fame, Rogers possesses a fund of dry humor. It came on him suddenly one day when he was giving a rope performance in vaudeville. He says he felt the audience growing cold and he felt that he had to do something to save himself, so he began to talk. Just what he was saying he says he didn't quite know, but suddenly the audience began to chuckle, then to laugh, then to roar, until the entire house was in an uproar. Rogers says he was scared for he didn't know whether the crowd was laughing with him or at him.

After that he always jazzed as he skipped his rope.

In his first cartoon the linen run like this:

Rogers—Did you know Congress would have put prohibition through ages ago?

Interrogator—How come they didn't?

Rogers—Well, they never was able to git a quorum o' Senators and mis-representatives out of the saloons long enough to vote on it.

PROSPECT UNION TO HEAR W. L. STODDARD

William Leavitt Stoddard, who installed shop committees in war industries under the auspices of the War Labor Board, will address on "Democracy in the Factory" at the Prospect Union Saturday afternoon. With the new year, all college and elementary courses at Prospect Union are discontinued and membership drive will be continued to January 15. A plan of self government has been adopted.

Tempters of the Weak Should Share the Penalty of Guilt

December 30.

Editor American:

There is a case in the paper today about two young boys that were given three hundred thousand dollars in bonds and sent out to deliver them somewhere. These boys were tempted by the amount of money, or other valuable securities which they regarded as money, and stole some of them.

Of course, the boys were to blame, and there is no doubt that they will be punished sufficiently. In all probability they will be punished excessively, in such a way as to ruin them for life and make habitual and hardened criminals of them.

But what about the men who thoughtlessly put so great a temptation in the way of weak and inexperienced youths? They are more to blame really than the boys.

There should be a law under which they could be prosecuted and sent to jail.

These boys are probably good enough boys, with the virtues and also the faults and weaknesses of the average boy. Under proper circumtances they might have grown up to be useful men, with at least as much honesty as the average financial magnate.

But, having been put in a very trying position, in charge of a very large sum of money, they were unduly tempted and fell.

The transformation of these boys, therefore, from average, useful men into convicts lies squarely on the shoulders of the men who thoughtlessly and indifferently subjected them to this extraordinary temptation.

Under our present laws, nothing will be done to them. They will get their money back. The police force, at considerable expense to the State, will be employed to recover their money.

The courts will be called upon to pass upon these cases and will devote a proportion of their valuable time to them. The boys will be arraigned, convicted, of course, sent to associate with hardened prisoners in some criminal institution, and graduated from there at length thoroughly depraved and wholly confirmed in a career of crime.

And the men who are morally responsible for this expense to the State and this injury to the individual will go scot free, and even assume an air of special virtue and injured innocence.

The man who puts undue temptation in the way of the weak shares the moral guilt of any crime that is committed, and should share the penalty.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Under the provisions of the criminal law, a man who procures by persuasion or by bribery the commission of a crime by another person is equally guilty with the criminal, and we think it would be simply justice to extend the law to include persons who through criminal carelessness put temptation to commit crime in the way of youth.

Of course, there must be messengers who have to be entrusted with the care of the transmission of money and securities and other portable values, but common sense dictates that these messengers should be grown men, old enough to realize their responsibility and to understand the folly of stealing.

Men who, in order to save a little money in wages, employ mere boys to carry about thousands of dollars in money and securities ought to be made to pay for their selfish conduct whenever that selfish conduct results in the ruin of the boys thus tempted beyond their power to resist.

National Aid for Better Housing Conditions

A recent Boston Sunday Advertiser contained an interesting article from the pen of Congressman George Holden Tinkham on the subject of dwelling houses and living conditions.

Mr. Tinkham is especially interested in the subject of housing conditions. He has introduced the bill in Congress to create a bureau of housing and living conditions, to be under the Department of Labor. He regards our living conditions as of the greatest importance in the consideration of causes of our unrest. It must be astonishing to those who read Mr. Tinkham's statement to learn that one-tenth of the people of the United States live in slums.

Mr. Tinkham's idea for national aid in housing comes from the great success which followed the work of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and the Navy and War Department's efforts to provide houses for employes and subordinates working for the government directly or indirectly at the yards and factories and camps scattered through the country.

Mr. Tinkham is right, there is nothing which makes so much discontent and disease as slum conditions. Nor is it necessary that those who cannot afford to pay high rents should be obliged to live on filthy streets and in dark and dirty houses. The expense would not be great in making a world of difference in the living conditions of our people.

People to Pass on Jitneys

The people of Salem are handling their jitney problem a little better than it has been handled elsewhere. This business of a City Council or a Mayor giving up a public convenience without consulting the people does not look at all like the orderly functioning of a democratic community.

In Salem it is proposed to submit the question to the people directly on a referendum vote held at a special election January 27. This is better—much better. We hope that the example will be followed elsewhere if any other cities have the same problem to face.

WHYEVER I do it.
I DON'T know.
BUT I carry a cane.
AS MY father did.
AND THE other morning.
I WAS one of a group.
ON A station platform.
AND A train came in.
AND ONE young man.
JUST AHEAD of me.
HURRIED INTO the car.
AND THERE was just one seat.
AND THE young man got it.
AND SAT himself down.
AND OPENED his paper.
AND THEN looked up.
AND THE train started.
WITH THE usual jerk.
AND I stuck out my cane.
TO BALANCE myself.
AND THE young man.
MUST HAVE thought I was lame.
FOR HE jumped right up.
AND TOOK hold of my arm.
AND SAID to me.
"PLEASE TAKE my seat."
AND I was embarrassed.
BECAUSE I pride myself.
I'M ABOUT as spry.
AS I ever was.
AND I told the young man,
I PREFERRED to stand.
AND THEN he said,
WHILE HE held me up.
"BUT I'M all right.
"AND YOU must sit down."
AND I got red in the face.
AND TRIED to thank him.
AND WOULDN'T sit down.

AND SO he did.
AND HE was so very nice.
AND SO very kind.
THAT ALL the way down.
TO WHERE I got off.
I HAD to stand.
AS THOUGH I were lame.
BECAUSE I hadn't the heart.
TO LET him know.
I WASN'T lame.
AND I was terribly worried.
ABOUT WHAT I'd do.
IF HE didn't get off.
BEFORE I did.
AND OF course he didn't.
AND WHEN I started.
TO THE door of the car.
HE HALF arose.
AS THOUGH to help me.
AND I motioned him back.
AND HOBBLED off the car.
LIKE A fellow I know.
WHO HAS one leg.
ABOUT FOUR inches shorter.
THAN THE other leg.
AND I kept on limping.
TILL I was out of sight.
ON THE station platform.
AND A man along side of me.
NEARLY THREW a fit.
WHEN I straightened up.
AND WALKED swiftly away.

I THANK you.

Boston's Princess Tires of Regal Splendor

PRINCESS RADZIWILL, formerly Dorothy Deacon of Boston, has tired of regal life. Straight to the Supreme Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church she has brought her plaint for annulment of her marriage.

American and European society has been electrified by the Princess' assertion that nine years ago she was forced into marriage with the dapper little prince. After living with her husband in apparent resignation since 1910 she has suddenly announced that she was an unwilling bride, led protesting to the altar.

Boston society is interested in the shattered romance of the Hub's lovely princess. Her father, the late Edward Parker Deacon, who married a great heiress and settled with his family in France, was a man well known to Boston folk. In 1890 he shocked all Paris by killing a wealthy Frenchman, M. Abelle, at Cannes, because he resented his attentions to Mrs. Deacon.

The full story of the latest Deacon marital tragedy will be found in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Further details of the weighing of the earth by Tech students will be found in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Boys from Cambridge assert that the globe which man calls home tips the scales at twelve sextillion pounds. Professor Louis E. Derr of Technology weighs this mundane sphere every year as a routine part of his class work in physics. It's an absorbing pursuit—read how he does it.

Candy, candy everywhere. Bonbons by the million—but hardly a sprinkle of sugar for the children's cereal, nor a spoonful for the coffee. Obviously there's something all wrong. Candy is a luxury pure and simple. Sugar for the household is a prime necessity.

It's all a matter of commercial "pull." The candymakers have it, and the housewives have'nt. Read the Boston Sunday Advertiser for a resume of the sugar situation and a line on the trust that is too strong for the government.

"Picture brides" from the Land of the Rising Sun are rapidly populating the Pacific Coast with children of the Mongolian race. Through an Oriental invention known as "mail order marriage," the Japanese have found a way of establishing their race in this country, defeating the law aimed to prevent multiplication of the yellow peoples here. At last Japan's statesmen have promised to stop this "picture bride" traffic. But what new scheme will be devised to import these potential mothers of many children into America? An illuminating story of Japanese courtship, found in the Sunday Advertiser, will tell you how the "picture girls" are Japanizing California.

THE OTHER MEN WHO PROPOSED TO YOU

You do not regret, Mrs. Married Woman, that you married the man you did? Of course not.

But, your thoughts stray occasionally to the different men who proposed marriage to you once, and menjally you compare their great success in the world to the very commonplace success of your good husband.

The wives of these men have richer homes and they enjoy more money for dress, travel and luxuries, but compared with your happiness you do not envy them.

You remember that each man whom you refused possessed some certain quality of mind or character which was distasteful to you, and these little unpleasant qualities become more pronounced and increase in irritating power with the years.

With all their wealth you could never become reconciled to their idiosyncrasies, and so you do not regret.

You know you would not give up the homey comfort, the satisfaction, the confidence which you have in your husband for the money of Croesus, and so what is the use of day dreams of this kind?

WHEN A BIG METEOR STRIKES EARTH

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE great meteorite which, according to the stories of eye-witnesses, burst over the eastern edge of Lake Michigan and plunged into the water some fifteen miles south of Grand Haven on Thanksgiving eve, spurting "streams of fire" as it struck the water, while the atmospheric shock caused by its explosion made houses tremble many miles away, was simply an uncommon example of a class of bodies in the solar system which would constitute a distinct danger to human life and property if their encounters with the earth were more numerous.

Even when we know that the chance of any person being hit by a meteorite is practically one to infinity, nobody can help feeling a slight thrill at the mere possibility of being immortalized by a mysterious bomb flung from interplanetary space. The most insignificant person in the world would deserve a column-long obituary by perishing, star-struck, in that way.

I know of only one apparently trustworthy record of the killing of a human being by a meteorite, and that is simply the bald statement in the Encyclopedia Britannica that at Mhow, India, "a man was killed in 1827 by a stone which is a true meteorite, and is represented by fragments in museum collections." There are a few reported cases of similar accidents coming down from earlier times, but all of them lack definiteness.

The flare in the sky, "blinding bright," or "like a flash of sunlight"; the appearance of a great ball of fire rushing through the heavens; the explosion followed by rumbling and thundering sounds, and by apparent shaking of the earth (really due to atmospheric waves), and all the other phenomena described by those who witnessed the fall of the Thanksgiving eve visitor, are in strict accord with previous records of similar occurrences.

Of Which Class?

The "spurt of flame" described by the lighthouse attendant at Grand Haven as the meteorite plunged into the lake must have been due to the intense illumination cast by the glowing mass upon the water and steam thrown upward from the point of impact.

To which of the two classes—the iron meteorites or the stony meteorites—this specimen belongs can only be told in case it or some of its fragments can be recovered from the lake bottom or the adjoining shore. It would be worth a big price to any scientific museum to possess that meteorite. Even from the viewpoint of mere curiosity, what could be more interesting than a great stone or a huge mass of nearly pure iron, known beyond peradventure to have come plunging and roaring out of the sky, enwrapped with fire born from friction with the soft air?

The mystery of the origin of meteorites abides, and is rather deepened than otherwise by their separation into the two varieties already described. They appear to be fragments of something—but of what? Did a planet "blow up" at some time in the past, scattering its substance over millions of cubic miles, the pieces falling into orbits about the sun, and, owing to the perturbing attractions of the remaining and larger planets, occasionally being drawn into paths intersecting the earth? If so, where and what was this unfortunate planet before the dreadful catastrophe? Was it, perchance, an inhabited world?

Perhaps an Asteroid

Evidently it must have been outside the earth's orbit, perhaps among the "asteroids." A theory which has been condemned and revived two or three times holds that the asteroids themselves are fragments of an exploded planet. In that case the meteorites which reach the earth might be the smaller pieces, the shrapnel, resulting from the supposed explosion. There are theoretical and mathematical difficulties in the way of this hypothesis, but, on the other hand, there are very suggestive realities which obstinately argue in its favor.

IDEALS PART OF OUR DAILY LIVES

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"IDEALS" and "Idealism" are words which are very frequently used today. Most people, however, regard them as they do candy placed alluringly in the shop windows. We want the candy, but we need shoes and stockings more, and so we put off purchasing sweets until another occasion.

But the truth is that our ideals, whatever they may be, are just as much facts of daily life as our shoes and stockings. They are the tape-line by which we measure everything, whether we know it or not.

I have a letter from a man who asserts that he is an idealist, and he objects to some recently expressed views of mine on the right of a married woman to have her own bank account. He doesn't consider that I have a sufficiently high ideal of the marriage relation. He says:

"According to my opinion, you are not correct. I think that a married couple should have an account in both their names. It can be so arranged that they would both have the same drawing power. You know the old saying, 'United we stand, divided we fall.' Why are you so pessimistic about it?"

I am no pessimist, believe me. But you can't settle a practical question, especially one involving human relationships, by saying: "That is the way things ought to work out, therefore they have got to work out that way."

Unfair Experiment

A common bank account is all right for the married people who prefer that arrangement, but I still adhere to my conviction that it is a risky, often unfair expedient, and likely to be productive of more quarrels and arguments than are desirable in a happy household.

My correspondent continues: "You seem to regard marriage as a business proposition instead of a mutual agreement. When a couple are united in the bonds of matrimony they should live the life of one instead of two separate persons. That is my ideal of a happy, harmonious married life."

It sounds wonderful. Perhaps in some rare cases it can even be accomplished. But at what expense? It simply means that one of the persons concerned has submerged all individuality and become the mere echo of the other. That is not beautiful. It is pitiable.

And how can there be any mutual agreement into which the question of food, clothes, housing, etc., enters without its being in some important aspects more or less of a business proposition?

A man and a woman marry. They are happier together than they were apart. What does that prove? Simply that their natures are congenial and their affection enduring. They are willing to make the compromises and concessions necessary to a real union. Nevertheless, their fundamental characteristics remain unchanged.

Now every one likes to regulate his own affairs to a certain extent, especially his own monetary affairs. Every one has his pet extravagances and his pet economies, which seem absurd to others, but which are nobody's business except his own. A happily married couple may have widely different views on expenditure. The husband may be a spender, the wife a saver. If they had a common bank account one of them would be embittered by arguments and bickerings which need never have arisen.

Anything She Likes

Again he says: "You may say what you like, but the right girl can make anything she likes out of the most brutal man."

My dear man, you take my breath away. I notice, however, that you qualify "girl" with "right." If we are to judge by observation, then, the most brutal men have a fixed habit of marrying the wrong girls.

Also, the romantic idea that many girls hold, that they can reform a man by marrying him, would seem, according to you, to be correct. It is—in about one case in a thousand. And then, while not detracting in any way from feminine influence, it is invariably the man who reforms himself.
